

May 12.—Pulse 100. First sound of heart weak. Tongue still coated with brownish gray fur. Was given calomel, followed by 2 ounces of castor oil. He showed symptoms of excitement during the day and at 5 p.m. became delirious with fear, calling out, "Oh! don't kill me." He was now placed in a bath at a temperature of 98°. He resisted everything in the most determined manner. Bowels moved freely. About 6 p.m. the patient became drowsy and was put to bed and given warm milk. He rested in bed quietly until about 3 a.m. when he again became restless and noisy. He was given warm milk, became quiet about 5 o'clock and slept well for four hours.

May 13.—Congestion of face has disappeared. Tongue still coated. He can talk lucidly for a short time but soon wanders and imagines people are being killed on the ward.

May 19.—During the past few days patient improved to such an extent that he was dressed and sitting on the veranda. His mind is brighter and his conduct good. He still complains about the left leg. The motor power in the right much reduced and he complains of numbness in his feet and hands. In walking he has a shuffling gait and drags the left foot.

June 2.—Patient slowly improving and the left leg, though weak, is gaining strength.

June 22.—Still complains of left side but is sleeping well every night and is generally improved. He still has delusions about his wife and thinks he can never live with her.

June 28.—Admits that he was all wrong about his wife, and says that she was always a good wife. He also says he was wrong about his children as he thought they were all dead but now knows they are alive.

July 25.—Patient went home to-day in very good condition.

September 30.—Patient is steadily improving.
