

ESTO PERPETUA.

At last "the writing on the wall" in Dublin Castle is seen. And Ireland's hopes, in Rosemore's fall, brighter have never been!

At last, O Erin! fate at last—Whose frowns were all thine own—On thee now smiles, and for the past Seems anxious to atone.

THE IRISH MAGISTRACY.

LONDON, April 4.—In the House of Commons this evening Justin McCarthy moved "That the condition of the Irish magistracy, constituted as it is, almost entirely of one religious denomination, and one class, is offensive and injurious to the majority of the people and calculated to destroy confidence in the administration of justice."

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

Dr. J. J. BYAN, St. Louis, Mo., says: "I invariably prescribe it in fevers; also in convalescence from wasting and debilitating diseases, with admirable results. I also find it a tonic to an enfeebled condition of the genital organs."

GREAT FIRE IN NORTH CAROLINA.

RALPH, N.C., April 4.—The greatest fire ever known in North Carolina broke out Wednesday and swept through vast tracts of yellow pine, which stretch from Sanford, 50 miles from Raleigh, to points northward and south 60 miles in North Carolina. The fire was caused by burning brush. Large masses of fire were actually forced through the air by a sweeping gale. Tops of half burned pines were thrown great distances. The flames towered to amazing heights at Alsea Crossing and Keyser. People gathered in large numbers and fought the flames with desperation. A dozen turpentine distilleries were destroyed as well as large quantities of resin, turpentine and other naval stores. Many persons lost clothing, and some were badly scorched. The town of Manly was in imminent danger of destruction. The railroad warehouse caught several times. The Methodist church, five guano and cotton warehouses and town garbouse were burned. At two o'clock yesterday morning Hamlet was surrounded by fire, many farm houses being consumed, but no loss of life reported. For ten miles east of Hamlet everything is destroyed. The fire last evening was burning only in limited places.

THE POWERS AND DUTIES.

of these diets the marquis would have confined strictly to local purposes, such as the imposition and collection of the poor rates, school taxes and assessments for local public improvements and the maintenance of public order within the provincial limits.

OPINION OF MR. A. M. SULLIVAN.

The World's correspondent this evening asked Mr. A. M. Sullivan, the eminent Irish publicist, for his opinion of the marquis's article. "Boh!" exclaimed Mr. Sullivan, "His Lordship doesn't know what he is writing about. His proposal shows that his ignorance of Irish affairs is simply deplorable. The marquis is fresh from Canada. The Canadians are peculiarly loyal and at the same time extremely jealous of their local rights. They possess local legislatures and are contented with the general domination of England. Lorne thinks it would be a solution of the Irish question to apply the Canadian system to Ireland. But the Irish situation is the very reverse of the Canadian. The people of Ireland are contented with their district governments and are at war against the general domination of England."

IRISH FLUOK AND OUBAGE ON THE WRONG FIELD.

The London correspondent of the Dublin Freeman writes:—"Irishmen must learn with conflicting emotions that England has alone to thank the dauntless courage and unflinching steadiness of an Irish regiment for the fact that the battle of Tinsulanee resulted in a victory and not in a disastrous rout and massacre of the British force. When the regiments comprising the first square—the Black Watch, the York and Lancaster Regiment, and the Naval Brigade—broke and fell back in confusion before the gallant charge of the Arabs, the day would have been lost had not the front line of the second square, the Royal Irish Fusiliers (the old 87th—the famous Faugh-a-Ballaghs) maintained its ground unwaveringly, and kept the enemy at bay until the scattered regiments had been rallied by their officers. The valor displayed by the Irish Fusiliers must take rank with the finest achievements of our countrymen in the field of battle. They not only bore the brunt of the shock of the Arab onset, but they were cool and steady in the face of the panic of their comrades in arms. I regret to notice that the nationality of the Fusiliers is adversely concealed by the war correspondents, who refer to them always under the indistinct title of 'the 87th Regiment.' But the true facts of the action have come out despite them, and the Irish regiment must be awarded the glory which is theirs."

LOSS OF THE STEAMSHIP DANIEL STEINMANN.

One Hundred and Thirteen Lives Lost—Only the Captain and Eight others Saved—Names of Emigrants for Canada.

HALIFAX, April 4.—The steamer Daniel Steinmann from Antwerp, for Halifax, is reported sunk off Sambro Head, about twenty miles from this port. Intelligence so far from the wreck, is very meagre. It is said the captain and five of the crew are the only persons saved. She had ninety passengers and thirty-four of a crew. Twenty of the passengers were to land here, all Germans, and seventy were for New York. The ship is supposed to have struck on the Sisters, off Sambro, last night, and shortly after sunk. The masts are now visible from shore. Intelligence did not reach here until two o'clock to-day. Considerable of the cargo on board was for here; the balance was for New York. The agents have gone to the scene of the wreck. Tugs which left here for the scene of the wreck near Sambro have returned, being unable to reach the neighbourhood owing to the rough sea. Another attempt will be made to reach the wreck in the morning if the weather moderates. The Daniel Steinmann was an iron vessel of 1,785 tons, built at Antwerp in 1875, and owned by Steinmann & Ludwig, of that place. She is schooner-rigged, has engines of 183 horse-power, and five bulkheads. The following were THE PASSENGERS to be landed here: The New York list not being received by the Halifax agents: Hendrick, aged 32, Cornelia 30, Petronella 11, Adriana 9, Johanna 8, Jan, 4, and Aria Cravenboer; also Paulus 35, Maria 33, Cornelia 10, Hildegrunda 8, Aria 4, and Aart Kranendonk; also Martinus Stok, 60, all labourers of Hilderkerk, Holland; also Sebastian Riedl, 28, of Woldterdorf, Prussia; and George Stikl, 23, of Gunttherof, Prussia. The last two were for Montreal, and all the former for Sherbrooke, Que.

A STIRING ADDRESS BY AN OLD MONTREALER.

The following eloquent address was delivered by Mr. Richard Ennis, formerly of this city, where he served his time on the old Montreal Pilot, but now one of the most successful merchants in St. Louis, Mo., at the eighteenth annual banquet of the Knights of St. Patrick, of St. Louis. He said:—

BROTHER KNIGHTS AND GENTLEMEN.—On the outpost of the old world a small and fertile island boldly breaks the Atlantic waves and confronts the traveller from our shores, dazzling the eye with its enchanting landscape and commanding attention by its grand and lofty mountains. As a helpless child on the brink of a precipice, as an abandoned mariner left on some desolate island to perish and be forgotten, she stands nestling in the ocean's embrace, her cries for assistance unheeded and injustice and tyranny extended, instead of tenderness and affection. It is Ireland—the land of our birth and the home of our forefathers, hallowed and endeared through ages of suffering and sorrow, and immortalized through the life and labors of St. Patrick, whose day we celebrate.

It is often asked why an organization like the Knights of St. Patrick, being non-political and non-sectarian, should, after an existence of eighteen years, give such evidences of vitality and patriotism as is manifested by this large and enthusiastic assemblage this evening. That from small beginnings it has increased in numbers and influence and outlived the prejudices of the envious and narrow-minded. The answer is flashed from every eye and engraven on every heart now besting in this assemblage, that while obeying the fourth commandment in honoring our father and mother, our next highest aspirations is that Ireland should be free; that the millions of Irishmen and their descendants in America appeal to the intelligence and humanity of the world for a redress of Ireland's grievances, and will use all honorable and legitimate means of warfare to accomplish that end. We hold that in the hands of men who are truly in earnest and bring undaunted courage and honesty of purpose to their support, the pen is mightier than the sword, and that civilized is preferable to barbaric warfare; that despite England, through the force of enlightened public opinion, will ultimately be forced to let go its hold on the freedom and national existence of Ireland and Irishmen, holding further as our firm conviction that at no distant day the pen and not the sword must be the arbiter in all that concerns the welfare and rights of humanity. My friends, let us look at the Irish question calmly, and from an honorable standpoint, without abuse or vituperation. A lovely and fertile land, watered by fair streams and caressed by a clement atmosphere the soil of which under proper management is capable of supporting in comfort twenty millions of people. Of which Lord Palmerston has said:—"The tenantry of Ireland, when they are properly encouraged and have reason to believe their exertions will meet with due reward, are as industrious as the tenants of any part of the world." A country peopled with a race of unusual energy and working capacity, intelligent and cheerful even in comparative poverty, in every clime and under many forms of government, showing themselves capable of distinction and prominence; an island rich in agricultural production, held in the embrace of a humid sea and flanked by some of the most magnificent harbors in the world; blessed with tenderness and virtue in its women, and integrity and industry in its men—within a week's travel of free America—Ireland stands to-day weeping for liberty and begging the wherewith to feed its famished population.

It may be asserted that Irishmen are not easily satisfied, and will never be contented under British rule. However we may differ on this point, that issue is not pertinent when we consider the long centuries of oppression and wrong visited upon them, and can in a measure be disproved by pointing to the content prevailing among its sons, notably in the British possessions, such as Canada and Australia, where, either through fear or policy, home rule in government and protection to manufacturers have been granted of late years. It could be further disproved if England had ever held out the least hope of one or the other of these great boons; but instead it has increased and provoked the people to desperation by odious and oppressive laws, brought its people to misery and starvation by depriving the laborer of the results of his earnings—in fact, continued the persecutions of the dark ages, making the Ireland of to-day a hotbed for spies and recruiting grounds for hirelings and informers. To the shame of its boasted civilization England continues to Ireland its bloody work of extermination and hate, visiting the smallest offences with the severest penalties, thus making life a burden to all who dwell either inside or outside of the protection of its military straps. And that English statesmanship has not long ago solved the problem of peace in Ireland; arises principally from the trucking subservieny to landlords and the privileged classes, rather than consideration for the interests and happiness of the whole people from a just and humane standpoint. In other words, she has Ireland by the throat, and it determined to hold its people in bondage and slavery by mere brute force without pretence to justice or the rights of humanity.

Can it be wondered at, then, that Irishmen, as well as all lovers of liberty, take advantage of St. Patrick's day to appeal to the enlightened opinion of the world to aid them in petitioning for a redress of grievances; for in the voice of the people humanity has an abiding faith. It is that faith which fired the hearts of the revolutionary fathers and eventuated in giving to humanity free and disenthralled America, and unfurled that flag.

That "makes tyrants tremble wherever it waves. O'er lands where base fetters are worn." The same faith nerved Wilberforce to persistently appeal to the British Parliament for the suppression of the slave traffic. The same power assisted the great O'Connell in gaining Ireland's religious emancipation, and now strengthens Charles Stewart Parnell in his patriotic and noble work. It freed the serfs of Russia, and emancipated the slaves of America. And here to-night the same power is invoked for Ireland's freedom and deliverance from British tyranny and oppression.

Happily, in this free and enlightened country, the bigotry and dissensions which have divided Irishmen at home and wherever British rule has ascendancy, no longer exists. The battle to be waged is too gigantic, and the victory to be won too significant to be confined to creed or condition. As is evidenced in the decorations in the banquet hall this evening, the orange and green stand shoulder to shoulder in battle array, and under the banner of Wolfe Tone and Emmet, O'Connell, O'Brien, Mitchell and Parnell, the millions of Irishmen in this and other lands join in waging war against a common enemy. Until freedom and enfranchisement is given to Ireland and Irishmen the agitation will go on, meeting, we doubt not, with the approval of every honest man who believes that true heroism consists in doing the right and daring the wrong; for, in this country at least, no man is censured, nor does he ever suffer, for standing up boldly and fearlessly for God, his country and his principles. And the man has certainly lived in vain, who, either through word or act, does not leave selfishness one side and contribute something of his life and labors to gladden the hearts of others, alleviate the sufferings of our common humanity, lessen the burthens of the oppressed, unloose the shackles of the enslaved.

Dear native land! The home of our forefathers, and the birth-place of our own dear mother, whose blessed spirit has protected and watched over us throughout life's eventful pilgrimage. As we honored and loved our parents, we also love poor old Ireland. It is thy trials and sorrows which endear thee to our hearts and command our sympathy and protection, and it is through contrast with the liberty enjoyed in free America that we feel more keenly the extent of the injustice and tyranny which now enshaves thee. And if, as it is intended, the feeble efforts of thy sons here assembled will eventuate in alleviating thy sufferings or in the smallest degree advance the cause most dear to thy people, then may we conclude that we have not commemorated the "day we celebrate" in vain. And so resting in that belief, with the firm conviction that Ireland's cause is just, will her sons throughout the world continue to hail with joy and satisfaction each recurring St. Patrick's day, and pray "God save Ireland."

Another was raised out of bed, where he had been laid up for a long time, with a lame back, by using two bottles. I have lots of customers, who would not be without it over night."
