MANITOBA'S LITTLE WAR.

Opposing Forces Meet in a Court of Justice Public Feeling Abated Somewhat.

WISNIPEG, Oct. 22 -The opposing railway forces met to-day in a court of justice it stead of on the open prairie, where the two lines are intended to intersect. The high public feeling, in consequence, is greatly abited, and the second toper thought of the people is that the matter should be left to the decision .: jalace. Besides this, there was a generally namphed rumor that Lieutenant Governor Schultz, using his constitutional privilege, ha: advised the Government against paraning any course calculated to imperil peace or loj ire the interests of the country, and it was his belief that his warning had had a salutary effect on Cabinet Minusters. At an early hour it was ascerted that no further attempt would be made to cross the Canadian Pacific rathead tracks, and that the rails would only be laid to the eastern edge of its grade pendhe decision of the courts. While trackng was proceeding, the Canadian Pacific Rairoad company, to make assurance doubly sure, planted another locomotive on its dump directly in line with the intersecting grade, and erected a four-foot fence, sixty feet long along its right of way. While the fence was being built the rails of the N. P. & M. were Isid exactly up to it, both gauge acting most good naturedly towards each other, but the C. P. R. men, come of whom ha i prepared themselves with etout sticks, were evidently determined to held the fort at all hazards. When the rails reached the fence the N P. & M. men quietly retired, and the cificials in charge immediately proceeded to town and reported to the authori-ties. Superintendent Mills explained to a reporter that he was only laying and when any obstruction was reached he had storped according to orders. He couldn't say what course would be pursued to secure crossing. The second engine located by C.P.R. is sunk deeply in grade, and with the first one and the solid train on the main line will effectually prevent the company being taken by surprise. Notwithstanding this, Superintendent Whyte has a force of 205 men on guard night and day, they being comfortably housed in colonist cars and supplied with beading and food. He addressed them this afternoon, and said they would not commit any overtact. He feelings of bitterness towards the English morely asked them to protect the rights and property of the company, and to do nothing appressive. Mounted infantry are still under orders at Fort Osborne and both the Nineteenth and the battery have been warned to hold themselves in readiness. It is evident now they will not be required. While members of the Government are reticent, one has made a statement to your our respondent to day that it would not be long before a crossing would be made. The inference is that the Legislature will be sum-

In court-Chief Justice Taylor presided. Affidavits on behalf of the plaintiffs were submitted: "That they were owners of the southwestern branch and had been in possession for some years; that the Portage extension of the Northern Pacific and Manitoba road built upon each side to their rails, and that defendants were attempting to cross their line without having obtained the approval of the Railway Committee of the Privy Council as to the way and mode of crossing. They claimed that the Northern Pacific and Manitoba Co. were really constructing a road, although the Kailway Commissioner was in charge and put in evidence of the agreement between the Manitoba Gov. ernment and the Railway Company." Affidavits in answer to this showed that the N. P. and M. were taking no part in the construction of the Portage extension either directly or indirectly. Martin and Greenway made affidavits that the road was being constructed and paid for by the Manitoba Government. Chief Engineer Stewart, of R.R V R., made affidavit to show that injury caused by crossing the Canadian Pacific Kailway branch would be of trivial nature, and that every precaution was being taken to prevent any danger or inconven-ience to the Canadian Pacific Railway. The contention on the part of the plaintiffs' counsel was that the Northern Pacific and Manitoba Railway company were really the parties trying to cross the Canadian Pacific Railway, and that, not having obtained the sanction of the Railway committee as to crossing, they had no right to cross; that the question of the right of Manitoba to charter railways at all which would cross railways declared to be for the benefit and advantage of Canada was now sub judice in the Supreme Court, and it was further contended that the Railway Commissioner, if exceeding his authority, could be restrained by injunction.

Per contra it was argued that Portage extension is a road being constructed by the Manitoba Government; that the Act author-ing the construction is still in force, and that while the Act remained in force no injunction could be granted against any railway commissioner, he being a member of the Govern-ment. It was further contended that the provisions of the Dominion Railway Act did not apply to the road now being countracted, as a third clause of that act especially excepts Government rallways from the operation of the act, and that this was a Government railway. Also, that the provisions of the Dominion Railway act refer to the railway company, and that there is no railway company or individual constructing the present road, but that it is being constructed by the Government of Manitoba and paid for with public moneys. Mesars. Aikins, Ewart & Cuiver appeared for plaintiff, and Attorney-General Martin.

Perdue & Davis for defendants. Judgment was reserved, but the Chief Justice said he

But the Attorney-General wouldn't accept favors from the Dominion Government and last session of the Federal Parliament was allowed to pass without any attempt on the part of the Provincial Government to secure the necessary legislation. PRESS OPINIONS ON THE SITUATION.

The Call says the question is not now between the Province and the C.P.R. or what the Dominion Government should have done, but whether the orders of the Courts should be obeyed, and says the law must be maintained even if troops are called out. It attributes the cause of the whole trouble to Mr.

The Free Press, while condemning the C.P.R. for its action in the matter, attributes the blame to the Local Government, which, it says, was warned of the very difficulty that has now arised, and were advised to the content of the c

RECONCILIATION OF IRELAND, | gratification of seeing both Government and

(Toronto Globe.)

Speaking at a Dublin National League meeting soon after his release from his prison, Mi John Dillon said:—

"He desired to express the great gratitude which he felt toward the multitude of English and Scotch people who stood by him during his imprisonment. He did not share and could not share the impatience that was expressed by some of his friends. That impatience was some of his friends. That impatience was natural, for it was, he knew, very difficult to see calmly the house of the people levelled by the crowbar; but when they saw how much the English people had changed in their attitude towards Ireland, the Irish people might well be patient. The English race were being converted at a wonderful rate. He, for his part, could hardly notice the difference in the reception which he would receive in English and Scotch towns as compared with the reception he would meet with in Cork or Dublin. When he considered these and other matters he failed to see any reason for impatience. Coming, though he did, from prison, he could not find in his heart any him. Maybe he had been demoralized by the many kind acts that he had received from Englishmen; if he had, he had no wish to go buck! into his original state.'

No Irish leader could have spoken so kindly of England and Englishmen some years ago without losing his influence with Irishmen at home and abroad. Mr. Dillon was cheered as loudly in declaring himself reconciled as he ever was of old when he spoke as an Irreconcil ble With such evidence of the result of Mr. Gladstone's moves to establish a Union of Hearts, it is shocking to see the Tories persisting in Coercion and in vituperation of the Irish people. By giving them Home Rule and a full partnership in the Empire the Imperial Government would gain the use of 50,000 bayonets now employed in compelling wretched tenants to submit to eviction; would save the enormous cost of mis governing 5,000,000 subjects; and would make friends of 20,000,000 people of Irish blood who are now influential in every part of the world.

England needs every friend she can make. No other Power has so much to lose by a com-bination of rivals against her; no other Power has possessions so conducive so her prosp rity and so difficult to defend; no other Power is so likely to be the object against which a league of the heavily-armed Continental nations will the heavily-armed Continental nations will sooner or later be arrayed. At this moment it is stated on pretty good authority that Bismarck and the young Kaiser meditate a vast combination against Great Britain. The worder is that her great military neighbors have not before this made a firm compact with one another to plunder her of her outlying territories and divide them among the allies. The rapid expansion of the English race and language threatens to reduce every Continental power to insignificance within a hundred years. That Russia, Germany, Austria, France, Spain, Italy and the smaller European States will not make an effort to check the world-grasping advance of the to check the world-grasping advance of the Anglo Saxon is highly improbable. It may be true that Britons can hold their own, but the atrugrle will tax their every element of force, and in that day it will be well to have millions of Irishmen on the right side.

But suppose one scouts the current rumor that a great Continental Combination against Great Britain is being arranged by Bismarck. Sup-pose one believes that the rivalries of the great military Powers and the diplomacy of English statesmen will always prevents dangerous league against the Empire. Is Ireland therefore to be denied self-government? Are the millions of brave Irish scattered throughout the world to be forever stimulated to hostility against England? Are Englishmen to be unjust and tyrannical because they think they can be so with impunity ? Unfortunately there is too much reason to believe that the tyrannical temper pervades the whole body of Tories. That is the true explanation of their monstrous Irish policy, as of all their innumerable efforts to maintain inequali-

There was not much improvement in the local trade during the week, the supply being large: the demand was good but prices ruled low. The supply of inferior cattle still continues large, farmers being anxious to get rid of their stock before the winter sets in. Good cattle was quickly bought up at fare prices, but the supply of this class are very scarce. There was a good supply of hogs during the week, but owing to butchers having a large supply on hand from previous week the demand was not very brisk, which caused a slight falling off in prices. Sheep remain about the same as last week, good sheep find a ready market and prices remain firm.
