

THE INFLUENCE OF RELIGIOUS HOME TRAINING

[A Paper Read at the International Eucharistic Congress,
Montreal, September, 1910.]

The Church, the Home and the School—these are the trinity that mould our lives, fashion our character and fit us for the knighthood of heaven and the knighthood of earth. Each of this trinity has its great work to do. The Church pours upon the new-born the regenerating waters of baptism and makes it a child of God and heir to the Kingdom of Heaven; the home represented in the father and mother keeps watch over the seedlings of grace implanted at baptism in the garden of the infant heart and nourishes those seedlings, while the school trains will and heart and mind to follow the precepts of truth and hearken to the voice and admonitions of God.

Now, the nearest representative of God in regard to the child is the Church, but
