The Sale of Materials for Comforter Making Commences Monday

With cooler nights near warmer bed clothing must be brought into use. Already some are into quilt and comforter making, to be prepared before the colder days arrive. Our sale of these comes at a time that's most appreciated, and the prices mean considerable saving.

A LARGE RANGE OF BEAUTIFUL FABRICS FOR COMFORTERS. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES.

red ground, 36 inches wide 40c yard

ART SATEENS—We have a splendid range of this material in floral designs, on white and colored grounds, that make ideal coverings for comforters, etc. Beautiful qualities.

A special Silk-Finished Art Sateen, close, even weave, in floral designs, with a finish almost like silk, 31 inches wide, 65c yard

COLONIAL ART SATEENS.

Something different from the usual art sateens. The Colonial Art Sateens will appeal at once to those who wish to make a really good comforter, or re-cover one.

THE FABRIC is a high-grade, close-woven, even-thread sateen that will give you every satisfaction for wear.

THE DESIGNS are of the best style usually found in expensive draperies, and range from the white grounds with delicate pink, blue and yellow floral designs to the rich, full-toned, all-over floral and leaf designs, embracing the exquisite art shades of French grey, Japanese blue, yellow, orange, rose, tan, pale green and mauve, in a dainty combination.

THE DYES are of the best, known as 'Firmaniline' colors, and are fast to subsequent reasonable washings, and to exposure to strong light, thus making the material ideal for side-curtains, box-covers, comforter covers, etc.

Colonial Art Sateens are made 36 inches wide, which cuts to such good advantage, two widths only being necessary in making up a comforter.

Bank-Book at Store.

The bank-book at the store is a peculiar place to keep a bank-book.

Glady's Lynch, a fellow-employee with Florence, swore that some weeks ago Florence had told her that she was "broke, and that the folks had hid her bank-book."

Miss Lynch, had never known subsequently, however, that Florence had kept the bank-book at the store.

That the girl did not commit suicide appears conclusively proven.

When taken ill she telephoned Elizabeth Wilson and Florence Trout, with whom she had been out the night before, to ask work together or home together.

The ladies explained to Mr. Hoskins that they had searched the house for Florence's bank book, and had not found it. They asked if he would look for it in the store.

"It was started," he swore. "No one had the heart to go near Flo's place so soon, but I said that if it was important I would see. It was there."

WOODSTOCK PUZZLED

family homestead in East Zorra, an appeal to the provincial police to send some competent investigator, but whether they act or not, Crown Attorney Ball will do so. The evidence taken at the inquest, which is voluminous, is now in final preparation, and will be taken to Toronto for perusal by Provincial Inspector Rogers. The expectations are that Provincial Detective Miller will be assigned to the case within a few days.

Concerning Bank Account.

At the inquest questions were asked concerning the dead girl's bank account. She received $100 from the estate of her father upon attaining her majority, but only $311 rested to her credit when her bank book was found. Mrs. Edwards, a little lady of perhaps 65 years, never went out much. Bella stayed home with her. Flo frequently went out with friends.

"Would it not be a good thing to ask that a provincial detective come to clear this matter up?" the reporter asked.

"I don't know," she answered. Mrs. Edwards was distressed visibly at discussion of the possibility of her daughter having been the victim of murder.

"I'm innocent, anyway," she stated. "Flo was my best friend
