The class rooms down: the hall were transformed into half-lit, artistically fitted out sitting rooms with palms and cosy corners. down the hall were transformed into half-lit, artistically fitted out sitting rooms, "says the crusty critic who cares for his Shakespeare supremely and detests the "starring system." Yet, but the actress was charming, young, unaffected and an artist, and she didn't write the play. That was done by two professional playwrights, who rather aimed at good effect and to bring out the charming personality of a really beautiful and interesting girl than to create a classical play.

The only pity is that an actress with the makings of greatness in her should not consider herself competent to play a greater part than that of Eleanor Alderson. It is a charming conception, a rational self-contained girl, rather a new woman, somewhat lacking in depth of feeling, but truly honorable and self-sacrificing. The improbabilities of the play are obvious enough, but do not appear to the hearer unless he stops to reflect critically. Frankly, one prefers to be amused rather than to be harrowed by too overstrained and tragic a situation. So when the suspense is quickly relieved, one is not disappointed, tho one knows it is bad art.

Miss Barrymore's gowns are simply beautiful. Their simplicity and softness, their delicate and subdued shadings, grey, white lace and green, with only the throat bare, suited the siendlers, over a lace bodice. The white lace was similar in style, with a lot of lawless characters. Yuba Bill, who drives the stage, has been "shot up," and the identity of the two men who did it has been a mystery. It is discovered that a shell bracelet, which Red Pete had given his wife, and which she in turn has given to her daughter, belonged to one of the passengers on the stage. News carried sengers on the stage. News arrived that a man named Baldwin, who, it is learned, has insulted Salomy Jane, has been shot by an unknown man. With primitive hate the girl had asked Rufe Waters, one of her admirers, to kill him, and he has refused. Salomy Jane is left alone. To her comes the indi-vidual who is known thruout the play as The Man. He confesses that it is he who has killed Baldwin, and Salomy helps him to escape.

OUR present selling prices are attracting wide attention. Bear in mind you pay no middleman's profits. Our purchases are made almost direct from the mines, and there is only one handling of them after they leave the syndicate offices and find their way into our premises. It must then be obvious to all that our position is infinitely stronger than the dealer who has not this advantage, and whose purchases have passed two, three, four, and sometimes five different channels.

The second act shows Red Pete's shack in the forest, and here the vigi-lantes come with both Pete and The Man. Both are to be hanged, and as The Man has no friends, it is suggested that Salomy Jane wish him good-by. She does this, and the curtain by. She does this, and the curtain falls upon a most pathetic and dramatic incident.

The third act shows Salomy Jane's home the same night. Here it is discovered that The Man has escaped, and once more the posse sets out to hunt him down. Salomy waits alone in the moonlight for The Man. He comes. Voices are heard, and Salomy gives The Man her father's hat and coat and places him on a bench, where he pretends he is asleep. Jack Mar-bury, gambler, discovers The Man, but helps the lover to escape again.

The fourth act is the corral scene. Salomy appears on a winding pathway just at dawn and it is known she has been searching all night for her lover. He has met a mortal enemy of her father's in the woods and has shot him down. Then learning that Salomy's father is suspected, he decides to return and give himself up. He meets Salomy. While they are discovering the salomy while they are discovering the salomy. cussing the point they are interrupted by Rufe Waters, but they overpower him, and learning that the father, be lieving that Salomy killed his enemy, has fled across the county line, go to

Those who have seen the play assert that nothing so true, so simple, so forceful, so tense, so pathetic, so humorous at times, and so satisfying, has ever been placed upon a stage.

Next week the Royal Alexandra Players will present another comedy made famous by well-known actors. "The Henrietta" is the work of Bronson Howard, and the play was made a great success by Robson and Crane. Miss Evelyn, who has been enjoying a week's rest, will enact the role of a jolly New York widow; Herbert Yost will have Mr. Stuart Robson's part as Bertie "The Lamb" and Mr. Robert McWade will play the part in which William Crane was so successful The story of "The Henrietta" is as amusing as it is interesting. The complications arise out of the name "Henrietta" and it is this which creates so much confusion amongst the characters introduced in the play. It so happens that there is a mine called "Henrietta," a race horse called "Henrietta" and a premier dansquee who is at

at the Grand hext week. Under the title of "The Cat and the Fiddle" the authors have strung together a strong story of an imaginary land, "The Island of the Eye," ruled over by "Great Gobs," the villain of the play. Great Gobs has imprisoned in a gigantic jar the good genii, The Cat and the Fiddle. In order to retain his power he is obliged to sacrifice to "The Eye" every hundred years a maiden with a strawberry mark on her left shoulder. He selects as his victim "Polly," and his attempts to carry her to the Island of Eye, and to make the sacrifice, and the frustrating of his efforts, forms the plot of the play. The scenic setting is unquestionably the most gorgeous and elaborate ever accorded a production of this character. The adventures set forth take place in a bewildering maze of scenic splendor and the three acts of the play are composed of 21 separate and distinct changes.

The sensational melodrama "Convict 999," a play which is said to head the list of this season in the startling nature of its story and the rapidity of its action, is the offering at the Majestic next week. Very little is left to the imagination of the audience. "Convict 999" is said to be a well-written and a very interesting play. It is also an exciting play and a strenu-
