

EXEMPTION TRIBUNALS BEGIN HEARING CLAIMS

Few Men in Category "A" Secure Release From Military Service.

Total applications before tribunals	320
Exemptions granted	105
Exemptions refused	63
Conditional exemptions	82
Decisions reserved	80

Thirty exemption tribunals started promptly at 10 o'clock yesterday morning to hear claims from men of class A for exemption from military service. In the city hall, Osgoode Hall, police stations, fire halls, churches and Y.M.C.A.'s, members of these tribunals, consisting of two members of the board and a military representative, arrived before the hour, and after unpacking and arranging matters, they were ready to hear claims or receive applications for exemption.

From then until the closing hour at 5 o'clock there was no great rush, as only ten claims were listed for hearing and ample time was allowed for the receiving of applications. With the exception of the tribunals at the Central Y.M.C.A. all were open to the press and public.

The outstanding feature of the first day's sitting was the small number of exemptions granted to men in category A. Few of the many who claimed to be the sole support of widowed mothers were given any exemption. In no case was absolute exemption granted, and at best an A2 exemption was given to a few men in most instances the claimant was absolutely refused or given a few days before reporting for service.

In connection with men other than category A2, many of the tribunals showed a lack of knowledge of their duties and powers. Few of the members knew that it was their duty to exempt, until called, those in categories B, C, D and E, and after handing the applicants temporary exemption certificates allowed them to depart.

Few Are Indispensable
Indispensables were few in number in the opinion of the military representatives at least. One of them put it in this way:

"In these cases I consider what would be done if the applicant were killed on the spot. Would the company close down?"

"There are few of us that cannot be replaced. Sir Lyman Jones died a short time ago, and the Massey-Harris works are still operating. An A2 man is most indispensable in the field these days."

On account of the information gained through personal investigation, the military representatives proved great assistance to the tribunals, and in not a few cases temporary exemption was granted on their statement of facts. In the instances where the military man took the aggressive attitude of a prosecuting attorney.

To support their sons' applications many women appeared before the tribunals, and in most cases one member of the tribunal had a son at the front. The claims were handled with the sympathy that comes from having a boy "doing his bit."
