The Man In The Street

Thanksgiving Day on Monday.

Isn't it lucky for them that the Germans have no such national holiday. What would they do with it, year after year?

Bulgaria will require a truly devout spirit to be thankful this year for what she is about to receive.

And Turkey will be able to sympathize with the bird which bears the same name. That nation knows what it feels like.

St. John is thankful for the spirit which has moved so many men to enlist, but with the volunteers not coming in so rapidly as they wish the recruiting officers may be tempted to use the prayer of the darkey who was giving thanks for a dinner of boiled potatoes and nothing else. "O Lord, we give Thee thanks for dese potatoes,—dere mighty fine and nice but, O Lord, we do wish You hadn't let them be so lonely on this Thanksgiving Day."

Covering Wide Territory

A travelers' platoon is to be formed with the 88th. The hardware men will carry their samples with them to Europe.

And a platoon of cherymen is being formed in Nova Scotia; the members will still be fighting the devil, but with different weapons.

Pres. Wilson may be a rigid peace advocate, but late matrimonial announcements show that he is at least courageous enough for a second venture.

They Didn't Believe Him

The auctioneer had labored hard. For ten or fifteen minutes he had extolled the good qualities of the books he was selling. He had told what a fine fellow their author was, how nice his novels were, what a success his plays had been and so on, and so on, ad infinitum, etc., but while the big crowd assembled before him followed his discourse attentively, they did not bid. They seemed to appreciate his remarks but their response was eloquently silent. In vain he called "How much am I offered?" Finally some one piped up and a small bid was offered, but the big crowd refused to "loosen." At last with a cynical smile and a disappointed air, the amateur auctioneer cried out—"Well, people, stick around, we're going to do some things away tonight." Bidding was a little more brisk after that.

Another From the Auction

The auctioneer was offering a lot of small articles at a time when bidding happened to be slow. With great eloquence he proclaimed the merits of the article he was offering and asked for a bid.

"Twenty-five cents," said a feminine voice.

"What, only twenty-five cents?"

"Same voice—"Thirty cents."

"No price at all," said the auctioneer, and again the voice responded "Thirty-five cents."

"Come on now, bid up," urged the volunteer salesman, and the solitary bidder obeyed the invitation.

"Fifty cents," was the offer.

"Sold to the lady for fifty cents."

"Oh, well, it's all for the Patriotic Fund."

THE BOWLERS

TO SEE THE BALL GAMES.

It is estimated that more than 100 St. John baseball fans will leave this evening for Boston to attend the world's series games in that city. Many intend remaining for short vacations, while others will stay to see two games and then return home. Among those who left on Friday were: Harry Black, M. J. Murphy, Harry Dever, Cornelius Gillis, William Murray and "Bud" Doppelt. The last mentioned will go on to New York to spend a short vacation before returning home.

CITY SOLICITOR HOME

Hon. Dr. Baxter, K.C., city solicitor returned to the city at noon today from Ottawa. With regard to the street railway situation he said that up to the present he had not had time to read the judgment given by Judge Grimmer and was unable to say anything as to what action would be taken. The only information he had had was by telegram, and he did not care to make any statement at present.

FIFTEEN DEATHS

A total of fifteen deaths was recorded at the board of health offices this week, resulting three from influenza, two each from phthisis, cholera infantum and carcinoma of stomach, and one each from myocarditis, heart failure, cardiac paralysis, intestinal hemorrhage, senility and infantile convulsions.

BROTHER WRITES OF LOSS OF GOLIATH

Thrilling Tale Comes to F. J. Punter From Dardanelles

WENT DOWN TWICE

Sank When Warship Was Torpedoed—All Over in Five Minutes—Writer Was in Water Hour and a Half

A thrilling story of the destruction of H.M.S. "Goliath," torpedoed at the Dardanelles, and his fortunate escape from death, is told by Torpedo Instructor Punter, in a letter to his brother, F. J. Punter of this city. The letter is as follows:

September 9, 1915.

Dear Fred:

I suppose you were more than pleased when you wired the Admiralty and received the glad reply that I was saved, but I can assure you it was more than a miracle, as very few were saved from our crew. I will tell you a little about it, but of course we are not allowed to say very much, or the censor will not pass it.

On the night of May 19 we entered the Dardanelles and took up position to support the left flank ashore. It was a very dark night and there was a big battle raging ashore at the same time. I was the torpedo instructor on watch and about one o'clock in the night I went on the bridge, had a look round and passed the remark to a chum that it was about the blackest night I ever saw.

I left the bridge and made my way to the engine room. Just as I arrived there we felt an awful smack on the starboard side. At first I thought it was gunfire as we were getting used to eight inch howitzers dropping in, but before you could say Jack Robinson there was another smack nearer the stern and she listed very heavily.

I hustled on deck as quickly as possible. Believe me it was some struggle. By the time I reached the quarter deck she was right over on her side and was going fast. I just managed to slip clear of my overalls when we were all smacked in the pond.

Down With the Ship

I soon came to the surface and as I opened my eyes I saw her towering over on top of me and all of a sudden I got a smack and down I went again, this time knowing of course that I was underneath the ship. Well, I struck out like a Britisher, thinking to get clear of her on the other side. I don't know how long I was down, but suddenly I felt my head above the water and I caught my hands and feet. "Thank God, I'm clear," I looked up and there she was upside down and going down very fast by the bow. I was pretty well exhausted, but I lay on my back and saw her disappear.

All this happened in about five minutes, so there was no time for anything but every man for himself. Then there was the struggle for the water. I can still hear the poor fellows shouting for help, but I could do nothing but strike out, and I saw scores of poor fellows disappear before my eyes. I swam on alone for a time and eventually came across a small piece of wood which I shared with an officer and we got along together as best we could.

The Rescue

Later on the other ships which were at the mouth of the Dardanelles flashed their searchlights on us and we were picked up by a boat just as we were about done out as the water was very cold. We were taken on board the Lord Nelson and, with the help of a little brandy and a few blankets, we soon came round again, but there was a lot of poor chaps completely knocked out when they were picked up. I was in the water just an hour and a half, and you may depend upon it I got a shaking up and it put a few grey hairs on my head.

You will notice I have been promoted to petty officer, first class, and was acting torpedo instructor on the "Golly Wog" (Goliath) as we lost our torpedo instructor at Dardanelles on the east coast of Africa, of course, you know, we did quite a lot of fighting before we were ordered to the Dardanelles. I must tell you about that later as our letters are so strongly censored we have to be very careful.

I saw our brother, Harry, in Portsmouth at the early part of the war. Of course, being a pensioner, he is on home service. They have given him charge of the hospital boat at the naval hospital.

I am now on the four funnel cruiser Pangloss. She is used as a depot ship, but, of course, I don't know where my next move will be, and I cannot tell you where we are. The only thing you can do is to send your letters to General Post Office, London. Hoping to hear from you soon, from your brother,

Lucky brother,
 BERT

"Preparedness"

This word has loomed large in the news of the last year.

It has frequently been linked with another vital word—"SUCCESS."

It is an important word to the business man—a word that robs competition of its terrors.

"Preparedness" includes a definite expenditure for advertising to entrench the business or product in public good will.

It means the kind of "business insurance" advertising brings.

This newspaper will be very glad to discuss with any business man this phase of "business preparedness."
