LAVISH IN CHARITY, HE DIES IN WORKHOUSE
Grimbsy Merchant, Once Very Rich and Generous, Cave Too Freely and Ended Life as Pauper

London, July 18—A life of strange vicissitudes has just ended at Grimbsy, where Robert Day Melhuish, once the port's principal fish merchant, has died a pauper in the workhouse.

Going to Grimbsy as a poor lad, Mr. Melhuish soon gained a prominent position in the fishing industry, at that time undergoing revolutions as a result of the advent of steam trawling. He created the biggest private business in the industry and amassed a huge fortune, but his success was his own undoing.

His generosity was lavish and reckless. While he gave huge sums for every form of charity, often he would send his cart laden with choice fish to the poorer parts of the town, where his men distributed the fish. He created the workhouse, when he was nominated for election on the school board he headed the poll with a majority of 600 over his nearest opponent, and after the declaration he was drawn around the town in a landau, preceded by a band of music.

Later he fought Grimbsy as a parliamentary candidate, but was defeated. The adversity overtook him and he became an inmate of the work-house. His former Prime Minister Aquilith was married in the workhouse, in which he died, but he drifted back to the work-house, where he died.

WEST INDIES SERVICE
Acting on the advice of Hon. William Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, following a conference yesterday afternoon, H. B. Schofield and L. G. Crosby met the shipowners for the purpose of arriving at a satisfactory arrangement for the West Indies service.

Besides Mr. Estabrooks, James Pender, H. B. Schofield and L. G. Crosby met the minister yesterday. The time was spent in discussing the best means for securing an improvement in the service from St. John and Dr. Pugsley, while assisting every assistance the government could give to the shipping and the steamship company.

Mr. Schofield and after the conference the shippers felt satisfied that Dr. Pugsley would do all in his power to improve the conditions. He had immediately despatched a wire to Pictou and Black, the steamship owners, asking when they could come to St. John for a conference with the local merchants. No reply was received last evening but one is expected today and the conference proposed, it is hoped, will have the desired result.

Before leaving for Ottawa by C. P. R. last evening Hon. Dr. Pugsley said that the matter had been very thoroughly discussed and there was every promise of a satisfactory arrangement being made. The minister will return to St. John at the last of the week. Mrs. Pugsley is remaining at Rollaway.

The Evening Chit-Chat
By RUTH CAMERON

THE state of Missouri's Widows' Pension Law which was passed in the last session of the legislature is being put into effect.

In the famous reform bill of Chancellor Lloyd-George of England there is a clause providing for a pension or allowance for maternity cases.

By the Missouri law any needy widow is entitled to receive a sum not to exceed ten dollars a month for one child attending school and as much as five dollars a month for each additional one.

The idea of the bill is to enable poor widows to keep their children at school without being obliged to go out to work themselves and thus deprive the children of their birthright of a mother's care and a well-kept home. Incidentally it is said that such a scheme would cost no more than the board of the children if the widow were obliged to place them in asylums.

The idea of the maternity pension, as I understand it, is to supply state aid that will make it unnecessary for any mother to work directly before the birth of her child and to insure proper care and comforts at this time to the poorest mother in the land. In at least one state we already have a law making it illegal for a woman to work for a certain number of weeks before or after her child is born, and this maternity pension is surely the logical and inevitable corollary to such a law.

Now, don't you think these are two splendid bills? I do. And I am calling large to your attention today because I think that knowing about them will inspire you to want them in your own community.

Don't you think it would be splendid if destitute widows and mother-to-be, incidentally the next generation—all over the world were protected by such laws?

Very well, then, why not do what you can to see that they are passed in your corner of "all the world"?

You don't know how you can do that? Well, do you belong to a woman's club or a big Sunday-school class or a Home Missionary Society or any large organization that could be brought to take an interest in such things? If you do, why not call the society at its next meeting about these laws and get it to pass a resolution approving them and ordering its secretary to write to its state representatives and senators asking them what can be done about such legislation?

Judge Porterfield, of Kansas City, Missouri, is putting the Missouri law into effect for the time, and he doubts would be glad to send a copy of it and information about its workings to any woman interested in it. And information about the maternity pension could surely be obtained from the English State Department.

Surely this is a subject in which any woman with the least bit of altruism in her makeup, that is, any woman whose usefulness extends beyond her love for her own immediate family and makes her care something that is to become of those myriad "sisters under the skin" who are less fortunate than she, cannot fail to be deeply interested.

Lord Pirrie, Head of The Harland & Wolff Shipbuilding Firm in New York Today—Some Facts About Him—A New French Minister

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Co.)

Lord Pirrie, who arrived in New York today, on board the Olympic, which is the biggest ship that has ever been launched from the great British shipyard of Harland & Wolff, which is in Belfast, was born on this side of the Atlantic, and is a native of Quebec, although his people come from Little Compton, in the county of Devonshire, in the southwest of England. His principal business connection on this side of the Atlantic is J. Pierpont Morgan, who shares with him in the controlling interest in the Mercantile Steam Navigation Co., in the Elder Dempster Shipping Company, and in the West India Mail Service, which gives them the right to operate steamships between Great Britain and the West Indies.

Lord Pirrie is a great advocate of the policy of protection—for the United States. According to him, the English shipbuilding industry would receive an overwhelming and crushing blow, if Uncle Sam were to adopt free trade for the construction of ships to enter free duty. He declared on an memorable occasion in the House of Commons that he would establish our shipbuilding yards over there, and I have always that possibility in view. How I do not regard it as a possibility.

Lord Pirrie formerly occupied a very important place in the Conservative circles when he was nominated as Knight of St. Patrick, some three or four years ago, all the other knights of the order, with the exception of Lord Castleknock, declined to attend the chapter meeting at Dublin Castle by the vicery for the purpose of investing him with the insignia of the order.

The consequence was that for the first time within living memory, a Knight of St. Patrick was invested privately by the vicery without any chapter, and without sponsorship.

The vicery, Lord Aberdeen, was said to have retaliated for this affront, by bestowing upon Lord Pirrie the command of the viceregal household, thus making him the principal dignitary of the court at Dublin Castle. As such, he took a leading part in the chapter of the Order of the Knights of St. Patrick held last week by King George at the Earl of Kitchener and the Earl of Shaftesbury, with the instigation of the vicery.

Whitaker Wright's home at Witley Court, in Surrey, which he purchased from the estate of the late Whitaker Wright, a promoter, who emigrated to New York on the collapse of his schemes, was arrested on landing, taken back to England, tried for fraud at the Old Bailey and committed suicide by swallowing a deadly poison in court while the presiding judge was in the act of pronouncing sentence.

Whitaker Wright had set out to construct for himself a home unsurpassed in splendor and at the time of his ruin, had spent more than $3,000,000 on the place. The mansion is built of stone, in early English style, with half-timbered work, and in the laying out of the grounds, which extend over 3,000 acres, Whitaker Wright had laid removed and lakes formed, according to his caprice. Among the features is a large circular constructed of glass, under the biggest lake, where, when set at gimmer, one is able to see fishes swimming above one's head.

Archduke Charles Francis

Young Archduke Charles Francis, nephew of the heir apparent (and in view of the latter's morganatic marriage, destined to succeed him in the course of time) of the thrones of Austria and Hungary, will make his home with his future consort, after their marriage at the Glaston of Hietendorf in the suburbs of Vienna. His extensive grounds adjoin those of the Palace of Schoenbrunn. His bride, as already announced in these letters, is the blonde Princess Zita, of Bourbon, daughter of the late Duke of Parma and a niece of that Archduchess Maria Theresia, who is the stepmother of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his principal supporter, in his differences with the remainder of the imperial family, on the subject of his wife's position at court.

The Chateau de Hietendorf is a most picturesque place, where the young Archduke Charles Francis spent as a boy many of his summers, it having been placed at the disposal of his widowed mother as a suburban house for herself and her two boys. It was there, too, that Archduchess Mathilde succumbed to the terrible injury which she had received through setting fire to the small dress which she was wearing. She did this in her efforts to conceal a light cigarette, which she was smoking, from her father, old Archduke Albert, generalissimo of the Austrian army and her stepfather, who was exceedingly strict in which she was chatting and smoking with Princess Frederica of Hanover.

Emperor and Empress Frederick of Germany spent several months at the Chateau de Hietendorf, during their prolonged stay at Vienna in 1873, on the occasion of the present Kaiser then a boy formed that close and intimate friendship with Crown Prince Rudolf, her husband, which subsisted without interruption until the latter's death.

New French Minister

Justin de Selva, the new minister of foreign affairs of France, is a rather distinguished looking man, of sixty-three, who for the last fifteen years has been prefect of the Seine, that is to say, civil governor of the metropolis. As such, it has been his duty to recognize the views of the national government, of which he was the executive as far as Paris was concerned, with those of the various metropolitan mayors and of the municipal council of the capital.

The mayors have mostly been socialists, and so, too, is almost invariably the majority of the municipal council. The result is that these city dignitaries and the national government, are constantly at loggerheads, and it had been the task of M. de Selva to keep the peace between them. How well he has succeeded is shown by the fact that he held the office of governor from 1890 until last week, being succeeded by M. Charles de Freycinet, senator and to that of Knight Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor. He is a member of that M. Charles de Freycinet, who has been frequently premier and who has held cabinet office since 1877 more often than any French statesman now living. In fact de Selva shares much of his uncle's suavity, kindness of character and utter freedom from official arrogance. He is very well to do, has a beautiful country place in the Department of the Ardennes, a wealthy wife in the person of the Hon. Germaine de Selva, and was for six years postmaster general of France.

The civil governor of Paris it has fallen to his lot to welcome officially all the foreign monarchs and royal and imperial personages visiting the French capital, and thus it appears that there is hardly a single ruler in Europe with whom he is not personally acquainted, a matter of considerable advantage to him as minister of foreign affairs and incidentally to his country, when one bears in mind the influential is the role played by sovereigns in influencing the foreign policy of their respective governments.

As prefect, too, he was in constant and intimate relations with the various foreign ambassadors and ministers accredited to France, and there is not one of them who does not rejoice in seeing his congenial friend de Selva, in the person of the Quai d'Orsay, in the place of those professional politicians who have occasionally been appointed to take charge of the international policy of France without any previous knowledge of diplomacy, of official procedure and etiquette, and often, too, ignorant of the most ordinary savoir faire and usage of the monarchs.

THE HERPICIDE GIN
Advices Gentlemen
At Mrs. Blank's reception I met a gentleman who fulfilled my ideal of a man in all but one particular. He had a good head, fine physique, perfect manners, was a most interesting personality, and bore himself with the distinguished air of a gentleman. His linen was immaculate and his clothes faultless as to cut and material. But all the pleasant first impression was ruined when I discovered the collar and shoulders of his dresscoat covered with those hair and flakes of dandruff.

To me this was a reflection of personal carelessness, not to say indifference. I wanted to call him to a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide. This remarkable remedy would, in a few days, have removed every hair and flake of dandruff from his head, and he would have been coming bald. I saw the flaked man, and they look old whether they are or not. Dandruff is caused by a germ and Newbro's Herpicide kills the germ. The flake which is so fruitful with dandruff stops almost instantly.

Herpicide is the Original Remedy, that destroys dandruff. There is nothing in the world just like it, nothing that is "just as good."

One Dollar Size Bottles are guaranteed by all druggists to give satisfaction. Applications obtained at the good barber shops.

Send list, in postage for a sample bottle and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., R. Clinch, Brown, special agent.

PREMIER'S SONS ARE GIVING GREAT PROMISE
Junior Aquilith in College and at Bar Show Scholarly Traits of Their Distinguished Father

London, July 18—There is a saying that a great man generally overshadows his son. In the case of Lord Pirrie, the son is showing a striking example of heredity in scholarship. His eldest son, Raymond, took all the highest distinctions at Balliol College, Oxford University, precisely as his father did. Now, Lord Pirrie is following in Raymond's footsteps, having entered Balliol with a scholarship from Winchester school, and won every thing before him. His next brother, who is still at Winchester, is said to be the cleverest of the whole family and it is confidently predicted that he will easily keep pace in academic distinction with his father and two brothers.

Raymond Aquilith is getting into leading practice at the bar, showing exceptional gifts as a lawyer and an advocate.
