

the exercise of your fidelity, and that its death would close up all those avenues of light and information, and would, in a degree, subject the connexion to wear the garments of ignorance and mourning. Therefore, dear brethren, put your shoulders to the wheel, and use every means within your reach to extend the circulation of so excellent a periodical.

We would inform you that much business has been brought before the present conference, and many questions of a very perplexing nature have been discussed by its members; but, whatever may have been our feelings during the heat of discussion, we are now happy to state, that there has been a disposition on the part of all the members to accede to terms of Christian charity and forbearance, and nothing is allowed to pass the threshold of conference but true cordiality and confidential friendship.

We earnestly entreat you, dear brethren, to seek for a deeper work of Grace in your own souls; and fear lest, a promise being left you, any should let it slip.

In conclusion, permit us to exhort ministers, class-leaders, stewards, and members, both male and female, to do their duty; and we believe that the ensuing year will be crowned with abundant success and prosperity, and that many sinners, who are now in the path that leads to the regions of dark despair, will be, through your instrumentality, renewed by the power of divine grace, and numbered with Christ's militant church on earth.

And now, dear brethren, we commend you to God, and to the word of his Grace, praying that he may build you up in your most holy faith; and when the clangour of Gabriel's trumpet shall rend the vaulted skies, and the entombed millions of the dead shall stand before the flaming throne of the Almighty, you may appear an unbroken company on the right hand of his glory.
