America's longest double-decked reinforced concrete bridge is nearing completion at Cleveland and will be 2,889 feet long, 80 feet wide and at its highest point 581 feet above the river it crosses.

The United States Government is urging that potatoes be used in making bread, but at the present time of potatoes it is a question whether bread containing them would be much cheaper than bread from flour only.

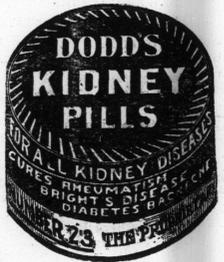

It appears, according to the Bethman Hollweg version, that Viscount Grey was responsible for beginning the war. There only remains King Albert of Belgium to be accused.

An Exchange telegram from Zurich says that at Prague, which is called 'the town of a hundred churches,' the military authorities have requisitioned and sent to the melting pot 182 church bells, representing a weight of bronze of seventy-five tons.

In an address to the Canadian Club of Ottawa, Senator Belmont, who was one of the Parliamentary delegates to England this year, declared that the British Navy could lose half its ships and still be as strong as at the beginning of the war.

British soldiers along the Somme have done something to get the boys out of the trenches before Christmas, even though their methods may not be the methods approved by the pacifists.

Canada's war expenditure last month was $22,000,000, compared with $8,000,000 in October of 1915. The need to save and work, to provide for the heavy burden of that expenditure, which is at the rate of $250,000,000 a year, was never more pressing.

In the course of an article on the slacker in the St. Mary's Journal, Miss Mildred Rogers makes this pertinent observation: "Of course Canada is a free country, but this fact is to the credit only of those willing to help her remain free."

London Telegraph: The movement of the armies fill the eye, and every day brings its reports of encouraging progress; but, silent and efficient, the British Fleet, hidden amid the mists, remains the main support of the Allies today, as it proved their deliverance at the beginning of the war.

The Canadian troops will be hurried to England with all possible speed. Just as fast as the ships can be obtained, the units now in Canada will be transported to the Motherland. A large proportion of the corps in training in Canada will eat their Christmas dinners in England.

German casualties reported for October were 190,000, but as the Germans systematically keep totals several months behind, that total more likely refers to August or July. The official list shows the 4,000,000 mark, however, and by the time it gets to 5,000,000 Germany will be about ready to throw up the sponge.

Getting Rid of Worry

It is Quite Easy to Do It if You Know How

It exemplified an old and drastic method of getting rid of worry, but it seemed like a startling novelty when it happened.

The four of us were out on the lake fishing. We had had a fair morning's sport along the edge of the rushes, where the water was about four feet deep, and where the bass were feeding in the early hours. The sun had arisen in a muggy atmosphere, and there was no wind. Then clouds began to gather in the northeast and a thunderstorm threatened.

Well, you know how a fellow hates to get wet, even if he has his fishing clothes on. Two of the crowd began to get nervous. 'We'd better pull in till the storm is over,' they kept saying. 'But the other two couldn't see it that way. The bass were biting, and maybe it wouldn't rain. And 'pulling in' meant rowing about two miles to where the dry woods were, and putting an end to the morning's sport. It would be noon before we could get out again—and bass don't bite at noon.

But the chaps who were afraid of getting wet continued to bother us. 'We're going to get soaked,' declared Bob.

'O,' said Bill. 'What do you care? Tween ain't new clothes, you get out and a little wettin' won't give you penny-money on a day like this. Shut up—I'm about to get a bite!'

'Well, you may like to sit around in wet clothes, but I ain't partial to it. Let's get the anchor up.'

Bill reeled in and put his rod carefully under the seat. Then he saw that the minnow-pail was shut and a cured and that the string of fish was tied tightly to the gunwale. 'Are you all ready?' he said. 'Yes said Bob. 'Then here we go!' cried Bill.

And he deliberately upset the boat. Standing up to our armpits in the lake, we sputtered objection. But Bill was calmly righting the boat and climbing back into it.

'Now,' he remarked, as he adjusted a new minnow and made a magnificent cast, 'we won't hear no more about gettin' wet. There ain't nothin' further to worry about. Let's fish!'

And it was as he said. When we got through casting we had an elegant time, and I feared no rain that might fall. We caught a lot of fish, too, and by the time we got ashore for lunch we were dry and happy.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

American Tells Why He Enlisted

London—Lieut. Colonel F. C. Bollock, the only clergyman to command a battalion of troops, is now in London, where, without doffing his khaki, he has been preaching in a Unitarian church. He is in command of one of the American Legion battalions raised in Canada.

In answer to a question why he, an American minister, had joined the British army as a combatant, the Colonel said: 'I hold it is wrong to tell another man to go out and shoot without you go and do likewise. The men I have the privilege of commanding, and more, came voluntarily. They realized, as I did, that this was a war of principles, not of nations, and that the United States was affected by the outcome just as much as the Allied nations.

It was a quest on whether the mailed fist should rule civilization, or whether the principles of the man whose fists were mailed to the cross should prevail. But the sinking of the Lusitania was the casting of the die. Then I announced I had furlined my flag, that it never again should be carried by the breezes until the country which had been so long my home should declare itself against such a damnable outrage.

'I then took a commission and combatant rank, and helped to raise a battalion which grew into eight,' added the Colonel, with a satisfied smile.

'In America,' he continued, 'there is a ubiquitous sign 'safety first.' There is no more ignoble sign unless it be that of 'too proud to fight.'

'As honor comes before safety, rightness and justice take precedence when it comes to a question of pride and fighting.

Accuse Teutons Of Treachery

Canadian Officer Slain by One He Tried to Save

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—Canadian soldiers have learned to treat with good nature and trust the prisoners captured from the ranks of their German adversaries, but the Teutons officers have gained a reputation for unspicable treachery, according to an official communication issued here by the Canadian War Records Office, describing in detail the taking of Regina trench by Dominion troops at midnight of Nov. 18, after 18 hours' bombardment.

The instances of this treachery are all too numerous, the statement says. The following must suffice as a specimen of the breed we are out to suppress. One of our captains in a lull in the fighting found a Prussian officer lying desperately wounded, bleeding to death. He knelt down under heavy shell fire and gave his enemy first aid, bandaging his wounds so that he could be moved. Then he turned away to get the stretcher bearers.

The moment his back was turned the German propped himself up on his elbow, drew a bomb from his pocket and threw it with deadly aim. The Canadian officer was blown to pieces. The Prussian evidently thought his villainy would pass unobserved in the confusion of flying death, but several of our men had seen the whole affair and he paid the penalty.

'It is not strange, therefore, if the German officer when captured does not always find quite so amiable a reception as greets his rank and file.

The victory in gaining the Regina trenches is described as a very smart and complete one, well rounded off, with no ragged edges to give trouble afterward and securing to us a desired post of vantage. Moreover, it was gained and held at relatively small cost. The number of unwounded prisoners was small, something like 50, but included three officers.'

The statement says that this victory 'confirmed the men in a sense of dominance over their opponents, whom, with lofty amiability and subtle assurance of supremacy,' they call 'Fritzy.' The communique concludes with the declaration that 'in the temper behind such an attitude dwells the certainty of triumph.'

Inquire into Coal Deliveries

It is announced from Ottawa that a Royal Commission has been appointed to investigate and report upon conditions with regard to the delivery of cargoes of coal to the coasting vessels in the Maritime Provinces. It consists of Wilfrid Tupper, inspector of subsidized steamship services; Sir Archibald Tibbets, officer in charge of harbor commissions; and J. F. McDonald, Customs collector at New Glasgow.

For some years there have been complaints that the sailing vessels were not getting their fair share of coal cargoes but that, instead, there was discrimination in favor of steamers.

The agitation has been especially strong in Prince Edward Island where, last session, the Legislature passed a resolution calling for a Royal Commission.
