

Sir Charles Tupper, who was received with applause, delivered his lecture, beginning by sketching the history and conformation of Canada. He said that the climate was highly invigorating. The prairie regions offered a very great area of land for settlement of races from northern and western Europe. An area of 5,000 square miles south of 60 degrees north latitude was probably the best location of all crops grown in England. A great source of climatic amelioration was the prevailing wind from the Pacific, warmed in Japan. In many parts the climate of Canada was similar to that of France. Apples, peaches, Lake Huron, peaches grew in the open air, and the manufacture of wine and the growing of fruit were amongst the most profitable pursuits of the agricultural community. The season for the fruit was earlier than in any other country. Apples were gathered every morning from the Niagara district, laden with peaches, grapes, and other fruits. Nova Scotia was famed for its apples, which were exported in large quantities to the United States. All the fruits, large and small, which are common to Great Britain, grew abundantly in Canada, while many of those produced here under glass were raised in the open air in the Dominion. The raising of cattle in the Northwest territories and British Columbia, lived and thrive in the open country throughout the year. He found vegetation of all kinds much more advanced in Victoria, British Columbia, than in the States. It was the same in the following year.

It must not be forgotten that the bulk of imports from the United States consisted of raw material. In recent years the import from England had increased, and that from the United States decreased. It was a gratifying fact that during the financial crisis of 1907, when the various banks affected the United States and under which hundreds of banks and financial institutions succumbed, not a single bank in Canada had failed from a similar cause. One of the evidences of the progress and prosperity of the country was the accumulation of the savings of the people, which had risen from 33,653,594 dollars in 1870 to 270,000,000 in 1894. It must be in mind that these figures were swollen by deposits in the Ocean Banks by English and other banks. The savings in Canada had increased from 1881 to 1891 to the extent of 40,000,000 dollars. Sir Charles Tupper then reported the British consular in Chicago as to the exhibition of the nation at the Chicago Centennial. He said that the exhibition entered the multifarious exhibits from Canada was a very high one. As a steamer recently chartered to St. John, N. B., we learn that goes to the Bristol channel, one Fleetwood, and one may possibly come to this port. So these are widely distributed. Upon the point of the use of these goods the steamer ship canal of the Bristol, e. below Runcorn, has been used by the importers of the Canadock, Liverpool, to what an extent has been shown in an interesting letter to the Manchester Guardian. A despatch to the London Constantinople reports that the palace officials and the British embassy, who are the chief exponents of the Sultan's policy, have decided to send Kimil Pasha to London, Dec. 12.—The despatch from Constantinople says: "It is reported that the Sultan has given Kimil Pasha's life, and gave him money down and 100,000 francs per month. The Sultan had a fit of generosity and suspected and he Kimil Pasha a rosary has announced his increasing his salary to 100,000 francs. This is the general opinion. Kimil Pasha has acted foolishly, and he is playing a
