

Men's High Class Boots
$5.00 a pair

We never had such a range of men's high class footwear at the popular price of $5.00 a pair

The very newest and swellest shapes of the season. Ask to see the "Cub," with a pretty shaped high toe, or the "Hyde Park," the newest English design. Straight, narrow toe, high vamp, low square heel and blind eyelets.

Black gun metal calf, lace and button

Waterbury & Rising, Ltd.
King St. Union St. Mill St.

The St. John River Hydro-Electric Bill

Promoters have Failed to Live Up to the Arrangements.

ARE NOW ASKING TIME EXTENSION

Incorporated in 1912. Were to have begun Actual Construction Work within 18 Months—Limit Expired Oct. 20th.

The Frederick Gleason, commenting editorially on the application of the St. John River Hydro-Electric Company to the legislature for an extension of time, says: "The bill promoted by the St. John River Hydro-Electric Company is one, the consideration of which must be taken up with extreme caution; in fact there is a very considerable section of the public pretty strongly of the opinion that it would be very much better not considered at all."

It will be remembered that this company was incorporated in 1912, its principal object being to develop hydro-electric power, by means of the erection of a dam across the St. John River between the Shogomoc and Pokok streams. Various powers of compulsory expropriation of adjoining riparian and other lands were conferred upon the company and other powers thought incidental to the purpose of the undertaking. In return for these concessions the company was to deposit with the Receiver General a sum of $25,000 as a guarantee of its bona fides, which should be returned as soon as the company had shown these bona fides by expending $200,000 in promotion of its works. The actual work of construction was to be commenced within eighteen months from the passing of the Act, the 20th April 1912, and within two years from that date the company was also to have expended the $200,000 in such construction, or lose the rights granted by the Act.

The time limited for commencement of operations expired on the 20th October last, and nothing whatever had been done. No plans have been submitted for the approval of the Lieut-Governor-in-Council, no deposit as guarantee of bona fides has ever been paid and appear to have been done, except to obtain the privileges conferred by the Act and to keep any other applicants who might have more bona fides about them, out of the way.

Now the company is applying to the Legislature for an extension of time in which to commence work; it asks for two years from 1st January last. No reason whatever is assigned for asking for such extension and the report of the St. John River Commission, matters would be any further advanced at the end of the extension of time than they are at present. The company should at least have shown its good faith by depositing the $25,000 of the Act called for by the conditions and any reasonable excuse for its two years' inactivity offered it might have received a application that would overrule the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

BIRTHDAY OF UNCLE TOM'S CABIN TODAY

Immortal Work First Published in Book Form, on March 20, 1852—Started War.

Nowadays that type of dramatic production professionally known as the "Tom show" has been relegated to the "Keweenaw circuit," and the novel on which it is based has been picked to pieces by literary critics, who have found many faults and flaws in the immortal work of Harriet Beecher Stowe. Yet no other novel in the history of literature ever exercised so profound an influence on human events as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "crude" and "melodramatic" as the critics say it was. Today may be called the sixty-second birthday of "Uncle Tom," for the novel was first published in book form on March 20, 1852. At the time of its book publication it was still running as a serial in the "National Era," an abolitionist journal published in Washington by Gamaliel Bailey. The serial publication was commenced in June, 1851, and was not completed until the following April. The anti-slavery paper had a comparatively small circulation, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" provoked no more than a ripple on the surface of events until it was brought to the notice of the same abolitionist in the case of Upton Sinclair's novel, "The Jungle." As a serial in a socialistic weekly, the best trust exposure disguised as fiction passed all but unnoticed, but its book publication immediately upset the world's stomach.

John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was placed on sale in the book stores of Boston. Neither the author, nor the publisher, John Jewett, of Boston, was the first publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a young man, and his business was not firmly established when he undertook the publication of Mrs. Stowe's work. He was greatly interested in the early chapters of the serial, and being an abolitionist, he had a sentimental as well as commercial interest in giving the story a wide circulation. He contracted with Mrs. Stowe for the book rights, but, as the serial publication proceeded, Jewett became alarmed over the length of the tale. He began to think that the book would not sell, and he began to look for another publisher. He was then at a bitter stage, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was hailed by the abolitionists as an epoch-making work that would overthrow the hated institution, while be friends of slavery were impelled to read it in order that they might attack the conclusions drawn by the author. Within a week the novel was selling by the thousands, and the presses of the young publisher would not supply the demand.

BUILDING A CITY IN A WILDERNESS

Architect's Dream to Design a Whole City is Realized—New Capital of Australia Located on Mountain Plateau.

In a short time Walter Burley Griffin, formerly of Chicago, will return to Australia, and under his direction the work of building the new capital of the Commonwealth will begin. The plans, of course, have been long since decided upon, and Mr. Griffin is now in England completing arrangements for the International Court of Judges, who will pass upon the contracts for the Parliament Buildings. He has been appointed director of design and construction for a period of three years, in which time, it is believed, the new capital city will be built. It is not quite, to completion. Mr. Griffin was the prize of $5,000 offered for the best plan for the new capital, and the set of plans for the new capital, and later on was invited to go to Australia to consult with the Government about certain changes it was desired to make. Very few alterations were made, and only such as were satisfactory to the architect. It was then concluded that he was the proper man to have charge of building the city.

A Boyish Dream. A remarkable feature of Mr. Griffin's new position, according to a statement in the Chicago Record-Herald, is that as a mere boy his dearest wish was to build a whole city from his own plans. At the time he was a student in the University of Illinois, and Australia had not yet decided that it required a new capital, so probably Mr. Griffin's wish was, no more than any other boyish day-dream. The remarkable thing is that it should have been realized. He read in a magazine that some important changes might be made in Australia, that a new capital might be required, and that possibly one might be built far from any existing city. Later on the Federation of Australia became a fact, and the discussion of a new capital a live question. The young student in the meantime had qualified himself for the work by taking courses in both architecture and landscape architecture, so that when he read in an architect's magazine that a prize was to be offered for the best set of designs, he set to work. He had the advantage of most, if not all, of the 25 other competitors in that he had been idly dreaming and planning the ideal city for years past, and it is due to this, perhaps, that he was successful.

A City Built to Order. Australia's new capital will be called Canberra. The site is located between Melbourne and Sydney on a mountain plateau, about 2,000 feet above the sea, and about seventy-five miles from Jervis Bay. The plateau is in the form of a triangle, the angles being marked by Black Mountain, Mount Ainslie, and Mugga Mugga. The surrounding country is rugged and picturesque, and covered with timber. To the southeast, the plateau is in the heart of a federal district comprising some 400 square miles. The population of Canberra, which will be five or six thousand, will occupy twenty square miles, about one quarter of this being in the city proper.

Arrives at Bristol. The Royal mail steamer Royal George of the Canadian Northern S. S. Co., Captain F. J. Thompson, R.N.R., arrived in Bristol at 11 p. m. Wednesday and landed her passengers yesterday morning.

TOOK SEVERE GOLD. Left A Terrible Hard Cough And A Nasty Tickling Sensation In The Throat.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is rich in the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, and for this reason it cures that tickling in the throat which causes that dry hard cough that keeps you awake at night.

Mr. Sanford Roods, Antrim, N.S., writes: "Last fall I took a severe cold which left me with a terrible hard cough and a nasty tickling sensation in my throat. I tried many cough medicines, but they did not help me so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before I had used half of it the cough had left me, and the next one made a complete cure, and I will recommend it as the best cough medicine on the market."

See that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. Do not accept any imitation. The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price, 25 and 50c, and manufactured only by The T. Millburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

No Leaky Roofs. If you use Brandford Asphalt Roofing, which is made of Pure Wool Felt and Asphalt. Nothing to harden or crack.

A Single Application Banishes Hair from Face. (Beauty Topics) Here is a way to remove obnoxious hairy growth while you are preparing your outfit for the evening. Mix into a stiff paste enough powdered delatone and water to cover the hairs not wanted. Apply, and in about two minutes rub off and every trace of hair comes with it. Washing the skin to remove the surplus delatone leaves it soft, clear and free from blemish. To insure success, be certain that you get real delatone.

Christie Woodworking Co. Ltd. 248 City Road Write for Samples.

CONSUMERS' COAL CO., Ltd.
331 Charlotte Street
Phone M 2670

EXCELLENT CONCERT IN CENTENARY

Programme Arranged by Church Orchestra, Delighted Large Audience Present—Many Encores.

A very delightful concert was given last evening in the school room of Centenary Methodist church, when a programme of unusual interest was rendered before a large and appreciative audience. The school room of the building was packed to capacity and the varied and well balanced programme was listened to attentively by all.

Useful New Invention

Enables Anyone to Play Piano or Organ Without Lessons.

A Detroit musician has invented a wonderful new system which enables any person or staid child to learn to play the piano or organ in one evening. Even though you know absolutely nothing about music or have never touched a piano or organ, you can now learn to play in an hour or two. People who do not know one note from another are able to play their favorite music with this method without any assistance whatever from anyone.

Brandy to Cure Catarrh

Recent experiments have proved conclusively that catarrh is a constitutional disease, and that salives, sprays, inhalers, etc., merely temporarily relieve the disease, and seldom, if ever, effect a permanent cure. This being so, much time and money has been spent of late by a noted specialist in perfecting a pure, clean, yet effective tonic that would dispel all traces of the catarrhal poison from the system. The result is given in the following formula, which has been found to produce most surprising results in an incredibly short time. From your druggist obtain one oz. of Parmit. Take this home and add to it one-quarter pint of hot water and two tablespoonfuls of brandy and four oz. of moist or granulated sugar. Stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Asparagus Omelet.

Into one cupful of thick hot white sauce put one cupful of asparagus which has been drained. Do not stir. Make an omelet, and when it is ready for the platter, mark it to fold, and remove to the dish. On half of it place the asparagus and white sauce, sprinkle with salt, and fold the other half of the omelet over it. Garnish with parsley.

Eggs and Baked Tomatoes.

Plunge six medium-sized tomatoes into boiling water, and remove the skins. Cut off the tops and remove the seeds and centers. Into each slip from the shell one raw egg, season with salt and pepper, and cook in a hot oven until the eggs are set. Serve on buttered toast.

MACAULAY BROS. & CO., KING STREET, ST. JOHN, N. B.
Our Stores Open at 8.30 a. m.; Close 6 p. m.

43c BIG SALE OF 43c
A YARD A YARD

PONGEE SILKS

Today, Friday, and Saturday

We will offer a large quantity of Natural Pongee Silks, suitable for dresses, costumes, waists, coats, etc., which we were able to procure at a big bargain price that enables us to offer them at this exceptionally low figure, viz: for 34 inch, 43c a yard

These silk fabrics are among the leading materials for summer 1914 wear.

NO SAMPLES GIVEN OF SALE GOODS

MACAULAY BROS. & CO.

Rugs and Carpets

RUGS & CARPETS

Objects of admiration that are at the same time essential to every modern household and provide a lifetime of usefulness are well woven, tastefully designed rugs. Whether you are seeking the moderate priced domestic product or the more costly oriental floor covering, you will do well to inspect the stock at

A. ERNEST EVERETT,
91 Charlotte Street

NEW WAYS WITH EGGS.

Blaney Eggs.
Wash six medium-sized potatoes, and bake in a hot oven until they are soft. Remove the top from each one, and scoop out about half of the pulp, being careful not to break the skin. Into the opening, slip from the shell one raw egg, a pinch of salt, a dash of pepper one tablespoonful of butter, and the same amount of grated cheese. Bake in a hot oven for five minutes.

GILLETT'S LYE

BATS DIRT.

Useful for Over 500 Purposes

World produced... these being of...
DA!!
SOLD ONLY IN...
to all others...
Gents...
er Pound...
d value...
SOLD ONLY IN...
OKETS...
atchless...
and we will see...
MIL2...
da" are...
50c Per...
atchless...
arged.

Clocks.
ice clocks in Chaste de...
Watch Bracelets, The last...
in the DARK as easily...
ing leather cases—and...
ON & PAGE
NG STREET

Restaurants

fitting up your car for...
on remember to add a...
Motor Restaurant or a...
Automobile Outfit... will make the pleasure...
rip doubly enjoyable.

Restaurants...$33.00
Automobile Outfits...
$13.00 and $17.50
Bottles of Various...
$1.50 up

FOR THE AUTOIST.

APPLIES

olders; Loose Leaf... unched to any size

... LTD.
street

WILSON, LTD.

FACTURERS OF

Sheet Metal Work of...
y Description and Galvanized Iron Work...

Buildings a specialty.

Street. Phone M 356

er for

ST BACON

Main Street

LIMITED

BELTING

MARKET

IN TWO DAYS

All Sizes

1121. St. John, N.B.