Employment for Women. One of the greates fallacies of our times the notion that girls are "bettering" flocking to the cities to find mpoyment. If they could only know in dvance the privations and hardships that await so many of them, they would think a long time before starting The principal factor in the problem is the handling of ready money. Unless the is more than usually fortunate her wages will run from $4 to $6 per week. Out of this her board and washing must come first, and with the multitude of channels into which little by little her other necessaries must draw their tribute, it will readily be seen that her clothing will quickly absorb the small amount left. This will leave nothing for the purposes of entertainment or culture, and this is one of the pitfalls of her life, luring her to questionable means of enjoy-ment. After a while, perhaps, she becomes ill or tired from the strenuousness of her city life and she comes home penniles den to others. There are, no doubt, cases emedy whatever, as there are exceptions to all rules, but the writer believes the remarks apply to a much larger proportion of cases than one might think at first. In many cases the help of the girl is actually eded at home There may be young children, and a mother whose every nerve is strained to keep them fed, clothed, and generally "ministered unto." She has no time to enjoy herself in reading or in many of the ways she use i to have, but gives the prowning years of her strength and ambition to duties that should be shared by her older daughter, in order that that same older daughter may go to work in the city, wear fashionable clothes, learn city ways, ad amount to-simply a shop drudge. Leaving the negative side of the queson, let us look at the positive side, and counterbalance these city positions. Think out, first of all, the style of work you would or literary. Then think out how near you can come to your preference in your own locality. Suppose you would rather be out of doors as much as possible. What a wealth to choose from, and all healthful and generally profitable ! First of a l, poultry comes to mind. Belgian hares are very fascinating, and especially to be rebut returns from them are uncertain. The raising of calves and making of butter for line help now and then. Have you a horse at command? You could make regular rips to town or city and do errands for a small Another way to eatch the man you want to ride at a fixed sum per hour. If near a ter boarders or both. If near a factory establishment, you might take "dinner boarders," or near a school or college take time, popcorn balls, pickles, salad dressing, jellies, etc Many a one has made a good living making cookies and cake for customers. The "doing up" of fine laces and shirt waists requires a deft hand, and pays well for time spent, so does cleaning of gloves and straw hats. For the girl with a talent for using her needle, we might suggest parlor millinery, making shirt waists, embroidery, braiding and fancy work of all kinds in addition to the beaten paths of or haughty indifference. If a man proposes to a girl in an offhand way, if he asks her to be his wife just as he would ask her to go to a concert or a golf game with him, is it a matter of surprise that she refuses him?

How to Propose to a Girl — A Bache lor's Recipe.

The man who is really in love never knows when, how or where to propose. This, young lady, you can take as a sure sign of the genuineness of love. The man will suttler and stammer, he will blush, he will appear uneasy, he will pay lame compliments, and he will be paintully conscious of the fact that they are lame.

All this perturbation a man cannot assume; a girl with any sense can always tell.
