A BACHELOR'S CONSOLATION.

A Romance of the Needs.

BY ROSEFELLOW.

In a small little cot, not a thousand miles off, lived a lonely, contented old "bachelor." He cooked his own grub and dined by himself, and had no one to care on a patch.

With his cat, and his dog, and his little pet mouse, he was well contented.

But one day he was startled by a knock. So he went with holes in his clothing.

There no doubt were mice and mites quite near, who would do to relieve his distress. But he had had a cold, and he could never shake the appearance of house-picks and dross.

Now, this lonely old bachelor heard by a friend, or read in his morning journal, of the appearance of house-picks and dross.

Having fully determined to get a machine, he spent a whole day in inspection, for he had no one to help him.

For some thought the "Wheeler & Wilson" and another one, the "Gibson" was best. He was too much inclined to tell him.

And a few for the "Wheeler & Wilson" were ready to tell him. "The 'Gibson' is a good machine," said one. "The 'Wheeler & Wilson' is a better one," said another. "The 'Gibson' is a good machine," said one. "The 'Wheeler & Wilson' is a better one," said another.

So he bought the "Wheeler & Wilson" and he was well contented.

With his cat, and his dog, and his little pet mouse, he was well contented.

But one day he was startled by a knock. So he went with holes in his clothing.

There no doubt were mice and mites quite near, who would do to relieve his distress. But he had had a cold, and he could never shake the appearance of house-picks and dross.

Now, this lonely old bachelor heard by a friend, or read in his morning journal, of the appearance of house-picks and dross.

Having fully determined to get a machine, he spent a whole day in inspection, for he had no one to help him.

For some thought the "Wheeler & Wilson" and another one, the "Gibson" was best. He was too much inclined to tell him.

And a few for the "Wheeler & Wilson" were ready to tell him. "The 'Gibson' is a good machine," said one. "The 'Wheeler & Wilson' is a better one," said another. "The 'Gibson' is a good machine," said one. "The 'Wheeler & Wilson' is a better one," said another.

So he bought the "Wheeler & Wilson" and he was well contented.

A BACHELOR'S CONSOLATION.

A Romance of the Needs.

BY ROSEFELLOW.

In a small little cot, not a thousand miles off, lived a lonely, contented old "bachelor." He cooked his own grub and dined by himself, and had no one to care on a patch.

With his cat, and his dog, and his little pet mouse, he was well contented.

But one day he was startled by a knock. So he went with holes in his clothing.

There no doubt were mice and mites quite near, who would do to relieve his distress. But he had had a cold, and he could never shake the appearance of house-picks and dross.
