

There is religion in a flower ;
 Its still small voice is as the voice of conscience :
 Mountains, and oceans, planets, suns, and systems,
 Bear not the impress of Almighty Power
 In characters more legible than those
 Which He hath written on the tiniest flower
 Whose light bell bends beneath the dew drop's weight.

The heart's affections—are they not like flowers ?
 In life's first spring they blossom ; summer comes
 And 'neath the scorching blaze they droop apace ;
 Autumn revives them not ; in languid groups
 They linger still, perchance, by grove or stream,
 But winter frowns, and gives them to the winds ;—
 They are all withered !

A man gives alms privately, and charges no man to speak of it, and yet hopes by some accident or other, to be raised both for his charity and humility. And it by chance the fame of his alms comes abroad it is but his duty to let his light shine before men, that God may be glorified, and some of our neighbours be relieved, and others edified. But then to distinguish the intention of the heart in this instance, and to seek God's glory in a particular which will also conduce much to our reputation, and to have no reflection upon ourselves, or no complacency and delight in popular noises, no filthy adherence to stick to the heart, is the nicety of abstraction, and requires an angel to do it.—Jeremy Taylor.
