ets and dark trousers be more appropriate? My gown has a lace bodice and a marquisette skirt, with no train, and my attendant's gown will also be of marquisette. — Josephine.

Your father and the civilian guests may properly wear dark business suits at your semi-military wedding, or for a mid-summer wedding they may correctly wear white linen suits, or dark blue coats and white or dark-grey trousers.

your mother to wear at your wedding. The navy-blue dress with white accessories would be more suitable.

3. For your informal wedding the groom may wear a dark blue business suit. It isn't proper for him to wear a tuxedo. . . before 6 p.m.

4. You, the bride, cut the first slice of cake (from the bottom tier) and divide it with the bride-groom. . . as evidence that you and he will share everything, good and bad, through life! Then you may, if you wish, cut the other slices for the guests, or a servant or caterer's assistant may cut the other slices, or you may ask a friend to take on this responsibility. At a buffet, the guests may cut it themselves.

and Daniels singled in succession and the ball game was all over.

Borovitch retired the Reliance in order in the sixth and ninth, while Bawden turned the same trick in the seventh. J. Barriage, Green, Cy Barriage and Ethier stood up defensively for the losers, but it was player like Muldoon at short, Bancroft in centre, Mullins and Borovitch himself that played sensational defensive ball for the winning Flyers, who looked much the better club and deserved the night's honors.

the spirit of the centenary of the 16th century France and originally furnished a structure of moderate size, well planned for the comfort and entertainment of its guests and eminent in its purity of style. Additions that have been made from time to time by other architects during the expansion of the Chateau's facilities have adhered to the style of the original building. Exclusive of all public rooms, and including a large number of two and three room suites, the Chateau contains houses 733 rooms.
