A GLIMPSE OF SHAKSPERE

"Master Skylark," the serial story by John Bennet, now running in "St. Nicholas," gives the following glimpse of Shakspere in the May number:

On Midsummer Day there was a Triumph on the river at Westminster, with a shamfight and a great shooting of guns and hurling of balls of wild fire. The Queen was there, and the Ambasadors of France and Venice, with the duke of Lennox at a the Earls of Arundel and Southampton. Master Carew took a wherry to Whitehall, and from the green there they watched the show.

The Thames was fairly hidden by the boats, and there was a grand state bark all trimmed with slik and velvet for 'he Queen to be in to see the pastime. But as for that, all Nick could make out was the high carved stern of the bark, paiated with England's golden lions, and the bark was so far away that he could not even tell which was the Queen.
Coming home by Somerset House, a large barge passed them with many watermen

Coming home by Someraet House, a large barge passed them with many watermen rowing, and fine carpets about the seats; and in it the old Lord Chamberlain and his son my Lord Hunsdon, who, it was said, was to be the Lord Chamberlain when his father died; for the old lord was failing, and the Queen liked clever young men about her. about her.

about her.

In the barge, besides their followers, were a company of richly dress gentlemen, who were having a very gay time together, and seemed to please the old Lord Chamberlain seemed to please the 'old Lord Chamberlain exocedingly with the things they said. They were somebodys, as Nick could very well see from their carriage and address; and, so far as the barge allowed, they were all clustered about one fellow in the seat by my Lord Hunsdon. He seemed to be the chiefest spokesman of them all, and every one appeared very glad indeed to be friendly with him. My Lord Hunsdon himself made free with his nobility, and sat beside him arm in arm.

ly with him. By Lord and sat beside him arm in arm.

What he was saying they were too far away to hear in the shouting and splash; but those with him in the barge were listening as eagerly as children to a merry tale. Sometimes they laughed until they held their sides; and then again as suddenly they were very quiet, and played softly with their tankards and did not look at each other as he went gravely on telling his story. Then all at once he would wave his hand gaily, and his smile would sparkle out and the whole company, from the old Lord (hamberlain down, would brighten up again as if a new dawn had come over the hills into their hearts from the light of his hazel eyes.

Nick made no doubt that this was some young earl rolling in wealth; for who else could have such listeners? Yet there was, nevertheless, something so familiar in his look, that he could not help staring at him as the barge came thumping through the

In spite of his wild life, he was a striking handsome man.
The old Lord Chamberlain said something to his son, and pointed with his hand. All the company in the barge turned round to look; and he who had been talking stood up quickly with his hand upon the young lord's arm, and smiling, waved his cap.
Nick gave a sharp cry.
Then the barge pushed through, and shot away down stream like a wild swan.
"Why, Nick," exclaimed Cicely, "how dreadful thou dost look!" and, frightened, she caught him by the band. "Why, on!—what is it, Nick—thou art not ill?"
"It was Will Shakspere!" cried Nick, and sank into the bottom of the wherry with his head upon the master-player's knee.
