CANADA'S DESTINY.

Wilfrid Laurier Suys She Is to Be th Child of the 20th Century-Vir-

Child of the 20th Century-Virtually a Nation.

The following are extracts from Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech before the Canadian Club at Ottawa, Monday, Jan. 18:

We are proud to call ourselves a nation, and it is a matter for pride that we have more population than many of the nations of Europe who have filled history with their fame and renown. We have more population than Switzerland, than Belgium, than Swedien, than Denmark, than Norway. Our population at this moment cannot be very far from six millions, and it is not presumptuous to expect that by the next census it may have reached eight millions. We have witnessed the happy phenomenon within recent years of the end of what we used to call the exodus. At all events, I think we can claim that at this moment Canadian soil. For more than sixty years a current of population flowed from the north to the south, but now, happily, that has been stopped. We are not only keeping our own people within the Dominions but are increasing our pointain of yearing upon the country to the south. There has been in certain quarters some misapprehensien as to the result of American immigration to Canada. I have, for my part, no such misapprehension at all, whenever prople live und r good laws, well administered, and they are prosperous, they never resort to revolution. Whenever people ara happy under free institutions, each succeeding decade only makes them more loyal and contented, and I have no doubt for my part that the American efforts.

more loyal and contented, and I have no doubt for my part that the Am-crican citizen who settles in the Northwest Territories and becomes a Northwest Territories and becomes a British subject under Canadian laws will in the course of time develop into a good Canadian, and his children turn out better Canadians than himself. But, sir, while we claim with pride that we are a nation, we claim with equal pride that we are subjects of the British Crown—(hear, hear)—with equal pride, I say hear)—with equal pride, I say hear.

subjects of the British Crown—(hear, hear)—with equal pride, I say, because our colonial status carries no inferiority with it; it is not subjection. We have found that our Canadian independence is quite compatible with our dependency as a colony. The relations which we have with the mother country produce this double result. The present relations, however, though very satisfactory and likely to remain so for a long time, cannot always remain as they are. They shall and must improve as time develops, but they shall and will be improved after the British manner, gradually, without violence, and giving justice to everybody as justice is due to everybody.

and giving justice to everybody as justice is due to everybody. For my part I ventured to express a few weeks ago the opinion that the time would come whem we would require our own treaty-making power. I know too well the occasion of this gathering to enter into the discussion of such a topic. This is not a political organization, and if I were to discuss such a question I am inclined to think that my fricind Mr. Borden would take the counterpart. I do not know that this is his ideaupon this matter, but I am sure that I do not know that this is his idea-upon this matter, but I am sure that we can both agree that we may well reserve the discussion for the House of Commons, which will meet in a few weeks from to-day. I referred to this matter, however, only to say that it has been asserted somewhere that the concession of the treaty-making nower would meet the conthat the concession of the treatymaking power would mean the severance of the colonial tie. It is against that idea that I wish to protest. In my estimation, whenever the granting of power is necessary to such a colony as Canada, as Australia, as New Zealand, or any of the great self-governing colonies of the British Empire, to carry on their own laws for the development of their own interests, instead of lessening, it will simply strengthen the tie which binds us to the parent state. This has been the history of the past; it may be the history of the future.
No one could have supposed, for instance, in 1837, when there was a rebellion in my own Province of Low-rebollion in my own Province of Low-er Canada, when there was a rebel-lion in the Province of Upper Can-ada, that four years afterwards the same two provinces would have been entrusted with responsible Govern-ment; that the mother land would not hesitate to place in the hands of men who had been in rebellion the powers of self-Government. So she did, however, and the result was to convert men who had been rebellious convert men who had been rebellious into the most loyal subjects of the British Orown. Sir, in the past Canada has been the pioneer in what I deem to be the civilization of the warld, which shall be based upon peace. I told you a moment ago what was the difference between the Roman Empire and the British Empire. The difference can be summed up in this statement: The Roman Empire meant war; the British Empire means peace and harmony among all the races which are subject to its rule.

all the races which are subject to its rule.

The more I advance in life—and I am no longer a young man—the more I thank Providence that my birth took place in this Iair land of Canada. Canada has been madest in its history, although its history is heroic in many ways. But its history, in my estimation, is only commencing. It is commencing in this century. The nineteenth century will prove to be the century of the United States. I think we can claim that it is Canada that shall fill the twentieth century. I cannot hope that I shall see much of the development which the future has in store for my country, but whenever my eyes shall close to the light it is my wish—nay, it is my hope—that they close upon a Canada united in all its elements, united in every particular, every element cherishing the tradition of its past, and all uniting in cherishing still more hope for the future.

Wrestlers in Japan.

In Japan wrestling is what bull fighting is in Spain, the popular amusement. It not only provides entertainment for the masses, but is also patronized by the nobility, who avoid the theatre as vulgar and fit only for the common people. In the reign of the Emperor Suinin, about the year 23 B.C., there lived a man of pursual streeth of Toma, in the the year 23 B.C., there lived a man of unusual strength at Toma, in the Province of Yameta, says The New York Tribune. He was renowned for his power of kicking and was therefore known by the name of Kehaya, which means "quick kicker." The Emperor, hearing of his wonderful strength, summoned another strong man named Nomi-no-Sukune, a native of Idzummo, and commanded the two men to fight. Sukune killed Kehaya, and was rewarded by the gift of the land which had belonged to Kehaya, and entered the Imperial service. He is regarded as the tute-lary deity of wrestlers, and shrines are erected in his honor. This is the first mention of wrestling in the history of Japan, and the combat in first mention of wrestling in the history of Japan, and the combat in this instance was probably rather a kicking contest than wrestling proper. In the year 859 A.D., when the Emperor Buntoku died, there were two claimants for the succession Prince Korchito and Prince Korchaka, Instead of gathering armies and shedding blood, the two aspirants to the throne agreed to put the matter to the test of a wrestling match. The champion of Prince Korchito was the victor, and was the victor, and korchito was the victor, and was the victor, and korchito was the victor, and was the victor was the victor, and was the victor, and wa Match. The champion of Prince Korehito was the victor, and Kore-hito therefore became Emperor. Upon the establishment of an essentially military regime, in the year 1185, by Yoritome, wrestling became one of the necessary accomplishments of the samural of fighting men, who were trained in wrestling as well as in

I have been treated by doctors and have taken numerous preparations but none of them helped me in the least. I finally got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. In regard to physical conditions, the facts are these: Hudson Bay lies entirely within British territory—no other nation having lands bordering upon it, or in any way accessible by means of its waters. The only means of access and egress between it and the Atlantic Ocean is through Hudson Strait, which are four hundred miles in length and about forty miles in width at the narrowest parts. If I may trespass still further upon your valuable space, I would like to make a brief quotation from a letter of my own published in The Toronto Globe of September 26th, 1896, as it expresses to-day, as then, my feelings and facts upon the question:

"I have observed the islands and shores in many localities swarming with walruses, and I have witnessed such sights of reindeer as only photographs can describe. These, as well as the other products mentioned, have a high commercial value, but I will not further dwell upon this subject, excepting to speak briefly with the whale fisheries, through which alone Canada has already lost many millions of dollars. I might quote figures to prove this statement, as I have them before me, but it will be sufficient to state, that the assertion is not made without ample information upon which to base it. An average right whale, in bone and oil, is valued at from ten to twenty thousand dollars, and, as three or four whales are commonly captured by one vessel in a season, it is readily seen what are the possibilities of although, by the treaty of Utrecht, the sovereignty of Hudson Bay was ceded to Great Britain, it is just tainly high time that our Government should take steps to assert Canadian jurisdiction in our North Sea, and this cannot be better done than through an expedition, etc., etc."

Such an expedition, on board the whaling steamer Neptune, in charge of Commander Lowe, is now wintering in Hudson Bay, and it is greatly to be hoped that through his actions our rights may be respected.

Canada and England Compared.

Lord Strathcona, in distributing the prizes at the annual distribution in connection with Pitman's Metropolitan School at the Queen's Hall, London, pointed out that in Canada typewriting was practised much more widely than in England. The proportion of ladies employed in Canada was twenty to one, and they were able to make not only a respectable but a comfortable living. It was quite an interesting meeting, the traveling scholarshp of £25 given by the Salters Company for proficiency in modern languages was won by Miss Mackay, and for four years out of five has been taken by a woman. Without any special desire to encourage Canadian manufactures, simply because they are "Canadian," I find myself with a Canadian bicycle, a Canadian typewriter, and last and by no means least, in this land of logs and damp, a Canadian oil stove, which in five minutes can bring the temperature in a large room up to sixty-five, which, by the way, is the highest temperature one can stand in England. I would like to know from scientists why we can sit in a room with the thermometer Canada and England Compared.

THE ROOT AND THE FRUIT

Bu-Ju is not a remedy for symptoms. It is a cure for disease.

Disordered Kidneys will produce many troubles, among which may be mentioned Rheumatism. Sick kidneys cannot properly perform their functions; hence the system is flooded with uric acid and rheumatism in its various forms is the result.

Bu-Ju cures rheumatism, because it cures the cause of rheumatism, Disordered Kidneys; for same reason it cures dropsy, blood poison, weak heart, loss of ambition, sleeplessness, brain fag, failing memory irritable temper, sallow complexion, bad breath, lame back, and a hundred and one allments that spring from disordered kidneys, which is the root of the evil. You may pluck the leaves of a rank weed, or cut its stem, but so long as you leave the root it bears new fruit and spreads until its extermination is almost impossible. If you are suffering from any of the above troubles you cannot afford to neglect them. Neglect means missry, for what joy is there in living without good health? Bu-Ju, the Kidney Pill, has restored thousands and it can do the same for you.

is assuming alarming proportions, and agriculturists are beginning to fear for the beautiful crops which have resulted from the recent splendid rains. The invasion is now extending from the southern part of New South Wales to the western border of the colony. Trains are frequently stopped through the rails being rendered slippery by the crushed bodies of the insects, which cross the track in countless numbers. An extraordinary sight was witnessed near Bathurst, where a traveling army of caterpillars, said by eye-witnesses to be several inches deep, utterly consumed the oats in a sev-enteen acre field and the wheat in an adjoining field within a few

At the last meeting of the Council an Alderman alleged that a disproportionate amount of public money was being expended on the Mayor's ward. The Mayor retorted with the word "liar," whereupon the alderman rushed to the chair and struck the Mayor. Both were soon atterman rushed to the chair and struck the Mayor. Both were soon on the floor, hitting and kicking. They were eventually separated, the Mayor resumed the chair, and it was thought that peace had been restored. But suddenly the Mayor seized an inkstand and hurled it at the head of his opponent, missing his aim, but ruining the shirt fronts of several innocent aldermen.

The only regiment of regulars in the British army that has never yet been "blooded," that is, that has never been under fire, is the Irish Guards. This regiment was only formed in 1900, as, it will be remembered, the outcome of Queen Victoria's visit to Ireland, and in hon-or of the splendid work performed by Irish regiments at the front.
