Ten Don'ts For Young Men.

Rev. Albert M. Hyde, D. D.

Do not speak of 'The Old Gent' and 'The Old Woman'; fathers and mothers are a necessary evil in the present system of things. They have spoken respectfully of you when outsiders could not see anything on which they could hang even a small compliment.

Do not give all your attention to the education of the brains on the outside of your head. Football and a letter on your jersey are not sufficient training for life. The young fellow who is old-fashioned enough to go to school for study still has a place in the world.

Do not invest your nickel in a glass of beer, then afterwards criticize the other fellow who has invested his nickel in a savings bank. Beer checks and savings bank checks, as investments, are not in the same class.

Do not put the money of your father or your washerwoman in 35 open seats and 42 theatre tickets. They may prefer to spend their earnings in some other way. Do not measure your job entirely by the size of the pay envelope and the length of the vacation. Highway robbery is an ideal vocation measured in these ways.

Do not try to get rich quick; smarter men than you, who have come to town without a cent, have tried it and lost all they had.

Do not wrong a woman. Every woman is some mother's daughter. The white life you ask from your mother's daughter you have no right to take from the daughter of another.

Do not defile your tongue with profane and vulgar speech revealing your ignorance and showing the coarseness in your soul.

Do not think you have sounded all the ocean of truth when you have let out all your little lies. The ocean on whose shore Newton had gathered only a few pebbles can never be all in your tin cup.

Do not be a stranger to the church of your father. The old pew looks lonesome without you. Your father went to his honor and his property straight from the church door. The path is still there. You need the church and the church needs you.—Z. Adv.

Concerning Women.

The newest departure in Chicago public schools is "little mothers' classes," in which girls are to be instructed in the care of babies and young children. In fifty-six schools these classes are being opened, the instruction to be given on Saturday mornings. Dolls will be the babies and nurses will do the teaching in the proper methods of bathing, dressing, feeding and suckling, and show the pupils how to make babies comfortable and keep them well. We understand that the board of health furnishes the necessary equipment for the class-rooms. All girls need training in "mothercraft" quite as much as in cooking and sewing, which have long been taught in the public schools. But such knowledge will be of most immediate and far-reaching service among the "little mothers" in the tenements who have to take care of the younger children while the mother goes out to work. The older sister is more responsible than we have realized for the health and morals of our future citizens.

DOCTORS ADVISE OPERATIONS

Saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Swarthmore, Penn.—"For fifteen years I suffered untold agony, and for one period of nearly two years I had hemorrhages and the doctors told me I would have to undergo an operation, but I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am in good health now. I am all over the change of life and cannot praise my Vegetable Compound too highly. Every woman should take it at that time. I recommend it to both old and young for female troubles."—Mrs. EMILY SUMMERSOLL, Swarthmore, Pa.

Canadian Woman's Experience: Fort William, Ont.—"I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was weak and tired and I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it."—Mrs. Wm. A. BERRY, 681 South Vicker Street, Fort William, Ontario.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, it is not fair to suppose that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was weak and tired and I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it."—Mrs. Wm. A. BERRY, 681 South Vicker Street, Fort William, Ontario.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Recorder Deputa, of Montreal, has appealed to the Medical Council of the Province of Quebec for assistance in checking the growth of the cocaine habit. He suggests that physicians who are convinced of pandering to the victims of this drug be so disciplined by the body which has in its keeping the honor of the profession, that they will not want to run the risk of such dishonorable practice.

It is a good and safe rule to sojourn in every place as if you meant to spend your life there, never omitting an opportunity of doing a kindness or speaking a true word, or making a friend.

A most curious experience was that of a quarryman who in one of his 'ambles stumbled on an old deserted quarry, within which, half buried, lay an enormous block of marble.

An examining it he found a number of letters rudely cut and he managed to spell out the words:

"Blessed is he who will turn me over."

The man at once jumped to the conclusion that he had stumbled on hidden treasure. He rushed home and collected some of his friends to aid him. After much hard labor they succeeded in turning the heavy stone over. Another rude inscription met their gaze:

"Thanks, my friend, I am weary of reposing so long in one position."

Eczema on the Head.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head, tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my address, because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid ointment."

ESTABROOK'S RED ROSE COFFEE

A Credit to the Name

If you already know Red Rose Tea you will expect much of Red Rose Coffee because of its name alone. Nor will it disappoint you; for it is worthy of its name. Blended to combine strength and rich flavor, this fine coffee is crushed new-roasted into small grains, and freed from chaff and dust. These uniform grains readily give the true coffee flavor to a brew which pours clear without any sediment. You may expect rare quality from every tin of

An eminent Scotch divine was once asked how long he would require to prepare a speech. "That depends," said he, "upon how much time I am to occupy in its delivery. If I am to speak for a quarter of an hour I should like a week to prepare, if I am to speak for half an hour three days will do. If I am to go on as long as I like, I am ready now."

THE STANDING ALIBI OF H. STANLEIGH STORME

Neuralgia and Sciatica

Caused great suffering for 28 years. Nothing effective until Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills were used.

"It affords me pleasure to speak favorably of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills," writes Mr. W. T. Collins, Morphett, Ont. "I had been a sufferer for 28 years from sciatica, lumbago and neuralgia, and had tried every remedy advertised without one particle of benefit until I began the use of Dr. Chase's medicine. Before I had finished two boxes of the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills I noticed considerable benefit in my condition. I have so much confidence in these medicines that I have recommended them to dozens of my friends."

In severe cases of this nature the combined use of these medicines brings results which are both surprising and permanent. The Kidney-Liver Pills regulate the action of kidneys, liver and bowels, while the Nerve Food enriches the blood and builds up the nervous system. Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The man obeyed and was immediately sworn.

"Mr. Storme," said his counsel, "will you tell the jury what the witness stated that he would make a full report of the matter, and that he would leave town and never bother anybody again. Begged me, whom he befriended—befriended, gentlemen—not to give him up. That all he wanted was twelve hours to arrange matters in—gave me his word that all was not so bad as it looked."

"When H. Stanleigh Storme talks, gentlemen, there is no answer. I went reluctantly, but I went, nevertheless. I would have hesitated to give him up, I hoped there would be some way out of it."

"Gentlemen, you know what happened. I was the man who sat in the other room on the night of the Morrison robbery, and the man who was next of honor at the Derdington dinner on the night when the First national was robbed."

"The man that sits there, gentlemen," he continued, "is H. Stanleigh Storme, the man who committed each crime and all the others that have been so much explored, and upon each occasion without my knowledge, was able to prove an alibi."

"I have come here," added the witness, "to make what reparations I can for my innocent share in those two crimes by revealing to you the exact state of affairs as it exists. That is my story, gentlemen," he concluded, "pointing to the prisoner, and that is also his."

The prisoner sat spellbound, looking at the witness with a fascinated gaze in which desperation, wonder and admiration struggled for supremacy.

CHAPTER XVII

The Biggest Surprise of All.

The witness waited for the cross-examination. But there was none. He then stood up and addressed the judge.

"Your honor has my address," he said quietly, "and I can be found here at any time if I am wanted. Is there any reason why I should not go?"

The judge looked at both lawyers, and shook his head.

"You may go," he said.

The witness stepped down from the stand, and the crowd made way for him as he walked slowly down the water aisle. He had almost reached the door when the prisoner roused himself.

"By heaven's sake!" he exclaimed wildly, "you are not going to let that man go! Your honor, I will be heard! I must be heard," he cried insistently. "I am not—"

"Silence!" roared the judge again. "If you interrupt the course of this proceeding in this manner again," he continued severely, "I'll have you bound and gagged. You have counsel. You will have an opportunity to be heard when your time comes. But you must not interrupt the court."

The man who had passed down the water aisle smiled slightly to himself, and then stepped out through the door. The prisoner took his seat with a resigned air.

"Let it be upon your own head then, your honor," he said quietly, "it matters but little to me."

"Proceed," went on the judge, ignoring him.

"That's our case," said the district attorney with a note of triumph in his voice. "We rest."

"Proceed with the defense," exclaimed the judge.

Now the counsel for the prisoner had been doing some tall thinking during the testimony of the last witness, and in spite of the startling nature of the evidence he was pretty well prepared.

He knew one thing—that the resemblance between the two men, having deceived many people before, would constitute a strong argument with the jury in the defendant's favor. For it was just as likely that the witness Warburton had robbed the bank as it was that the prisoner himself had done so.

He had a dim recollection of the hospital that had been made out of the resemblance of Charles Darnay and Sydney Carton in Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities," and he proposed to avail himself of a similar advantage here. The more he thought of it the better he liked it.

He had had, of course, no feeling of this from his client, and he had been unable to prepare himself for it. In fact, his client's whole demeanor had changed from the instant the other man had appeared. He had ignored his counsel and kept his eyes fixed upon the witness and the court. He had not even confided a his counsel what it was he had wished to say.

But the lawyer was pretty sure from the present halting attitude of the prisoner that he could trust him without further preparation on the stand. His client was no fool.

He touched the prisoner on the arm.

"You take the stand," he said.

The prisoner looked at him, but did not move.

"You heard your counsel," said the judge with some severity. "Take the witness stand."

"Add they never did. For H. Stanleigh Storme was only half right in his last statement to the court."

The judge had his address all right, but that he was correct. But he was showing more than common astuteness when he said the judge had not been found there any time, I wanted.

"For they tried it many, many times, and with great persistence—later, and they found he'd proved an alibi."

"Where was he when it was tried?" he asked. "Was he in the city or in the country?"
