Rain and Floods.

PORTLAND, Pa., June 27.—There was a terrific shower in this vicinity last evening that caused widespread devastation. The Bangor and Portland railroad had a number of culverts and bridges washed away, and no trains will run to Nazareth until to morrow. In some places the washouts were 25 feet deep, and in others the water was four feet deep on the track. There is no travel on the New York, Hudson, and Western railroad above Columbia to-day on account of a washout. All the factories are damaged to a greater or less extent. The dams in Jacobus creek are badly wrecked, and nearly all the farmers dams in Jacobus creek are badly wrecked, and nearly all the farmers one's birth." between here and Nazareth have suffered more or less. EASTON, Pa., June 27.—Much damage has been done by the rainstorm in this section; trains are delayed in all directions by washouts.

SCRANTON, June 27.—Rain has been falling in this vicinity almost incessantly for the past two days, doing great damage to crops and causing everal dams to burst. At Strondsburg the glass works were flooded to a depth of several feet and many cellars are filled with water, causing great loss. Near East Strondsburg there is a serious washout on the Delaware, Lackawanns, and Western road, causing a delay of several hours to all trains. The Lackawanna river is steadily rising, and people on the lowlands, known as "the flats," are becoming alarmed, as if the river rises a few feet it will overflow its banks.

WILKESBARRE, June 27.—It has been raining for severel adays, and the Baltimore dam gave way this morning filling the creek and running over the lands of the Delaware and Hudson and Baltimore mines. The water began running into Nos. 2 and 3 openings of the mines, washing out the Province of the serious washing out the props, and causing the caving in of half an acre. The water is now running into the Conyngham mine, and the miners have made a hasty retreat. Every effort is being made to carry the stream in another direction. If the attempt fails, the loss will be serious. It is thought there will be no danger to buildings on the surface, but the residants are alarmed.

At one o'clock there was great excitement at the scene of the cave-in. It has extended a considerable distance, and already engulfed one house. The building was carried down with its contents sevents. Feet and combined sevents for the miners have made a hasty retreat.

The building was carried down with its contents seventy five feet and completely buried. A large portion of the branch of the Delaware and Hudson railroad is endangered and may disappear at any moment. Several houses are in peril, and their occupants are seeking safer quarters. There is no loss of life.

This evening another house was washed away into the cave. The waters are pouring into the Conyngham mine workings to-night, and all efforts to stop it bave failed so far. It has been raining heavily all day, and should it not clear up soon. The water will extend into the workings of other mines which connect with those now flooded ff will be two months before work can be resumed, and over six hundred aninors and labourers will be thrown out of employment.

LANCASTER, Pa., June 27.—The storm in this county is proving very disastrous to the growing crops. The tobacco and corn fields are badly washed, and in many cases the crop is completely ruined. All the creeks are swollen into torrents.
