MISSIONARIES STOPPED WHI SPEAKING IN THE OPEN AII A correspondent writes to o

of the English journals: "I fact that missionaries in Calcut have been stopped while preac ing in the open air might su gest that the authorities h adopted a backward policy this direction. The compar Sahib Bahadoor, or the 'Illu trious Company Esquire,'as t natives called the past gover ing power, were afraid of allow ing the popular mind to be cited on the subject of religion They did not wish it to thought that they had desig of tampering with the wor or caste prejudices of the H dus lest such an idea might sult in fanaticism or rebellic The great mutiny, caused part by the belief in 'greas cartridges," may be cited as e dences that this view, of them ter had some foundation to commend it, and the Gover ment policy had always be against missionary efforts, or a appearance that the Sahi wished to interfere with reli ious, or more particularly wi the caste, notions of the peor of India. Notwithstanding th the missionary did find his w to the plains of Hindustan,a at last became a regular instit tion in the country. From En land more than one religio body sent their representative German missionaries also four their way, and even Americ men, anxious to convert Hindu, came. The Roman tholics had done great things Southern India before our Go ernment extended its pow and lately attention has be called te the itinerary of a mo called P. Maestra Fra Sebasti Manrique, who visited North-We provinces in seventeenth century—that in the time of Shah Jehan-a he passed through Agra wh the Taj was building, regardi which he gave some interesti dctails, new to us, respectithat celebrated structure. The missionary penetrated to I hore and Mooltan, and ev reached Kandahar, of which have heard so much lathly, being a very distant place. his time there were Roman tholic missions in the No: West who were sometimes ored, and at times persecute even unto cruel deaths.
