The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Said Love to the young knight: 'I am the humble task.
I am the high adventurer behind the visored mask.
I am the fire of youth that fails not with years.
I am the master of passion and comfort of tears.'

—Theodore Roberts.
A few weeks ago an Italian princess, lady-in-waiting to Queen Helena, was stabbed to death by her lover who in the end later afterwards killed himself.

Of course you read about it at the time.
But did you, I wonder, feel beneath the scandal and sensation of the case, its impressiveness as a testimony to the primitive, world-wide, not-to-be-denied power of the universal passion?

Just think, these two people, so important in the eyes of the world that the smallest newspaper in the remotest country town chronicled to readers the next morning the details of their love affair, were as powerless in the grip of this passion as the feeblest and least important of mortals.

Of course, it is an old story, but as I read the earliest reports of this affair I was impressed anew with it, and wanted to bring it home to you anew.

Yesterday in the park near my home I came upon two young people scuffling along with the arm-in-arm obliviousness of the last stages of heart disease.

To the casual observer they were both thoroughly commonplace, thoroughly uninteresting and thoroughly likely.

He had a wobbly chin, red hair and a somewhat irrupted complexion.

Double Death Sentence
Capital Penalty for Youth and Girl.
Thomas Allan, twenty-one, and Catherine Smith, nineteen, who gained their livelihood by singing in the streets, were sentenced to death at Glasgow High Court recently for the murder of a boy of six and a half years, by dropping him over a bridge into the River Clyde.

The mother of the child in her evidence stated that Allan, her brother, had taken her children to live with him so that she might be free to search for a situation, and she believed that he behaved with great kindness to them. No motive was suggested for the crime.

When the judge donned the black cap after the jury unanimously found the charge proven, with a recommendation to mercy, however, on account of the youth of the prisoners, a pathetic scene was witnessed in court. Allan turned to support the girl who completely broke down, crying all her sobs on the name of her mother, and a gathering at the back of the court responded to the display of emotion with cries of grief.

She was thin and sallow, with a large nose, prominent teeth and straight, dark hair that hung in untidy wisps about her face.
They were both plainly dressed and evidently possessed of but little of this world's goods.

And yet, on the faces of these two eminently commonplace people shone a contentment and a happiness that not the costliest pleasures of earth could have enhanced.

Just think—merely by gazing into each others' homely faces and knowing that each was beloved by the other, these two people were finding as great happiness as the richest men and women in the world can have.

Just because you see this sort of thing every day you forget the significance and power of it, but they are there just the same.

We rave of the injustice of the fate that makes it possible for one man to have fine linen and rich food and magnificent home and limousines and finely bred horses, jewels, lawns, and leisure, while another spends long toilsome hours each day to earn enough to keep himself and his family from starvation.

Ah, but suppose fate had let all these things be evenly distributed, but had given to one man the power to feel this strange overpowering happiness and withheld it from another.

Wouldn't that have been a much less happy state of affairs?

Suppose we had to buy this happiness such as those humble folk felt, and the Princess lost. What great store we should set upon it. What high prices it would bring.

But now that it is "without money and without price," do we half appreciate it?

I wonder.
Forgive me if you do not like this whimsical strain, but if you do, so good what I have said and dream and wonder with me.

Ruth Cameron

Where There Are No Suffragists.
The Isle of Man, whose Parliament, the House of Keys, has been on strike, has a very different set of laws from those in England. There is no income tax, no land tax, and no death duties. All the revenue required is raised from taxes on food and drink.

There are no laws to restrict the hours that may be worked in factories and shops. Money-lending is not a profitable business there, for a 200-year-old law makes 6 per cent the highest interest that can be charged.

Yet imprisonment for debt is a far commoner penalty for failure to pay than it is in England.

Household Notes.

Candle grease can readily be removed from any fabric by laying blotting paper over the spot and applying a hot iron.

Fresh meat may be kept for several days by sprinkling a little salt on it and then wrapping it in a cloth wet with vinegar.

To remove cakes readily from the pans place them on a wet towel or cloth immediately after taking them from the oven.

When nuts are tasteless and dry, soak them in lukewarm water. It will make them swell somewhat and will improve the flavor.

When apples are cored for baking a delicious dish may be made by filling the hole with orange marmalade and a little butter and sugar.

To cook smelts so that they will be attractive, fasten the head and tail together with a toothpick after the fish is dipped in egg and crumbs.

Mothers can save much trouble if they will run darning cotton through the heels and toes of stockings when they come from the store.

To extract onion juice, cut the top off the onion, and press the heart with the spoon. Another way is to press the onion against a grater.

It is said that if in sprinkling clothes, a whisk broom is used the clothes will be dampened much more evenly than by sprinkling by hand.

If, after washing a garment, there seem to be harsh places, rub them steadily but gently through the hands and soon they will quite disappear.

Sea salt dissolved in a hot bath has a wonderful tonic effect. It should be first dissolved in a pitcher or cup and then poured into the bath and stirred.

Candle ends, melted and mixed with an equal quantity of turpentine make an excellent polish for floors, oil cloths, etc. It is equal to good beeswax.

To clean furniture without dusting up everything in the room cover the upholstery with a wet cloth and then beat it, renewing the cloth several times.

Wet custard is caused by cooking in an oven that is too hot. Set the custard in a pan of hot water and see that the water does not boil during the baking.

A thin piece of cheesecloth fastened over the cold air duct of the furnace outside the house will keep out much of the dust and save time in house cleaning.

As a garniture to the commonplace scrambled eggs, add a half dozen mushrooms, cut into bits and cooked in a teaspoonful of butter with half a green pepper, minced fine.

In making baked or boiled custard scald the amount of milk to be used and set aside until cool, then make your custard and bake it as usual; it will be perfectly smooth.

Many delicate and nervous people who cannot digest iron tonic should eat spinach, which contains more iron than even the yolk of an egg. Onions are also an excellent nerve.

Indigestion & Dyspepsia

In all its Forms can be Cured.

It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headache, I feel too tired to do anything, I have no heart to exert myself and at times I care for nothing. I often have a pain in the pit of my stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion, I feel just as tired when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden.

Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons to be suffering like that when it is in their power to get cured by taking a Bottle of Dr. Stafford's Prescription A. A sure cure for persons afflicted with stomach troubles. It can be obtained at panion, "I know you did not do it." When the judge pronounced sentences of death both prisoners broke down completely and had to be carried from the court.

8894.—A UNIQUE WAIST MODEL.

Ladies' Waist With or Without Tuck.

For general home or afternoon wear or for more dressy occasions, this design will be found very effective. The waist portions are tucked over the shoulders, and finished over the centre front and back with vest or short sleeves, or, as shown in the illustration, may be omitted for evening or dressy wear. The pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 inches bust measure. It requires 2 1/4 yards of 36 inch material for the waist and 1 1/2 yards of 27 inch material for the tucker for the 38 inch size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

Suitable materials for any of these patterns can be procured from AYRE & SONS, Ltd. Samples on request. Mention pattern number. Mail orders promptly attended to.

8892.—A GRACEFUL GIRLISH MODEL.

One Piece Dress for Misses and Small Women.

A practical but stylish design is here shown. The frocks are crossed below the bust and the neck opening is outlined by a sailor collar. Gibson plaits lend breadth to the shoulders. The waist is cut on the popular "peasant" lines, and may be worn with or without the tucker. The skirt has a front and back panel, stitched in tuck effect and joined to side and back gores. Cashmere, serge, henrietta, washable fabrics or silk are all suitable for this charming creation. The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 14, 15, 16, 18 years. It requires 4 5-8 yards of 4 1/2 inch material for the 16 year size, with 1 1/2 yards of 27 inch material for the tucker.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

Please send the above-mentioned pattern as per directions given below.

No Where to Lay His Head.

A young man named Thomas Evans, who came out of the "Pen" a few days ago and who has no home, went to the lockup last night and asked for shelter for the night. He has been in jail several times for vagrancy and the guard at the lockup refused to let him in. He applied to Inspector General Sullivan, who ordered him to be taken in. This morning he was sent to the Penitentiary.

Sure on the Paint.

In a provincial court Farmer A sought to recover from his neighbor, Farmer B, the value of certain sheep alleged to have been worried by B's dog.

For the defence it was contended that the dog which worried the sheep belonged not to B, but to A, and the following dialogue took place:—

Counsel for defendant: "You admit that the defendant's dog and yours were alike?"

Plaintiff: "Yes, they were as much alike as two peas."

Counsel: "When you saw the dog worrying your sheep where were you?"

Plaintiff: "About a hundred yards away."

Counsel: "One hundred yards! And you mean to say that at that distance you were near enough to swear the dog was defendant's and not your own?"

Plaintiff: "Yes!"

Counsel: "Wonderful! Now, do you mind telling the Court what made you so sure on the point?"

Plaintiff: "Not a bit! Ye see, ma dog had been dead two days!"

Verdict for plaintiff.
