Eight Dollars & Eighty-Five cts.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Which do you think is more valuable, eight dollars and eighty-five cents, or the habit of learning to keep a contract?

A queer little thing happened in our neighborhood recently. Two youngsters of about seven and ten years old had an argument about something else. James wanted Roderick to help him make a rabbit warren for his new rabbits. Roderick didn't want to. "I'll give you ten cents if you'll help me," said James.

Roderick wouldn't. "Give you fifty cents." "Nope." "Give you a dollar." Still obdurate.

Had To Get What He Went After. "I'll give you all the money in my tin bank," finally offered James, not because he really wanted the rabbit warren that much, but simply because in the excitement and sport of the thing he had to get what he went after. (Just as someday he will go after a college letter, or a good job, or the girl.)

Roderick (who I do not really think had been pushing James up, but had merely held out with the same kind of sporting instinct that made James keep on) finally said he'd think it over and ultimately did help build the warren.

And The Contract Was Annulled. Now, if there had only been eighty-seven cents, or some such childhood's sum of riches, in the bank, all would have been simple, but unfortunately there turned out to be eight dollars and eighty-five cents, which is a sum of which even grownups take cognizance. When James made ready to turn it over to Roderick there was a howl, communications were opened between the two families, Roderick was forbidden to receive the money and James to give it, and the contract was annulled.

Now, I can see where there would be a temptation to do that, but was it the right thing? True, it must have looked to his parents (though they are by no means poor) like a good deal to hand over to a neighbour for no value received, but shouldn't they have realized that they were buying character for their son?

She Had To Stand By Her Invitation. At my summer home I have a teaching children the primary virtues. Her little girl invited a friend to go swimming with her one morning. Later she found that some grown up guests were going in in the afternoon and, preferring to go with them, wished to go over and withdraw her invitation. The mother would not permit it. "I want my little girl to learn the value of a contract," she said.

There is such a thing as being too severe with children and asking too much of them, but I think that to regard them as released by their youth from the need of meeting their obligations, is a great mistake.

This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family for years, and consider it the best liniment on the market. I have found it excellent for horse flesh.

Fads and Fashions

Sleeves are long and wrinkled. The cuirass bodice is here again. Waistcoat effects continue in chiffon blouses. A new coat collar is of the high crush variety. Browns and reds are most in favor for fall. A fur striped collar is excellent on any frock. The closely fitted sweater blouse is conspicuous. The boxy hat made of velvet and felt is popular. The tailored suit should be severely severe in line. Simplicity is the rule with all well dressed women. The favored style for silk undergarments is tailored. Coat styles continue to dominate in most of the dresses. Knit wool dresses are trimmed with bands of silk jersey. Many sports coats of velour are trimmed with bands of knitted Shetland.

New Treatment Trebles

Hardness of Leather. A Norwegian engineer claims that he has discovered a process by which leather can be made two or three times as hard as it is normally, says the October Popular Mechanics Magazine. This is of very special interest in these days of high prices for footwear and other leather goods. While the leather can be made as hard as wood, it does not lose its elasticity, it is said, and also acquires greater resistance to both heat and moisture.

IMPROVING THE HANDS.

There are two methods of giving the hands enough sleep. One is to cause them to lie in the lap and rest. It may be difficult at first to control them to do this but it can be done. Another way is to put them to sleep in a pair of leather gloves at least two sizes too large, like a pair of men's gloves. Before putting the gloves on, the hands should be coated with some good skin food. This sleep should be given the hands not only when you are sleeping, but at any time of the day when it is convenient to do so, put the gloves on and rest the hands.

This does not mean idleness for the hands, for to be healthy one must have exercise. There is a difference in moving in work or exercise from that of fighting. Hands may be exercised and improved by performing household work, so long as too great a strain is not given them and precautionary measures are adopted. For instance there is dishwashing. The prevailing idea is that to wash dishes is to destroy the beauty of the hands. This is not necessarily so and if the hands are treated properly there will be no ill effect, and, in fact, they will be beautiful by such work.

Before beginning to wash dishes, the hands and nails should be thoroughly coated with cold cream, rubbing it well into the pores. They can then be put in the soapy water without fear of injury. As soon as the task is finished, the hands should be carefully washed with a mild toilet soap and warm water, carefully dried, and another coat of cream applied and rubbed well into the skin. Remove any cream which remains on the surface by wiping with a soft cloth, using considerable friction.

A Liverpool subscriber sends us the following:—"Birch's Quarterly" vouches for the following being a literal copy of a letter received recently at the Wigan Oil Controller's Office: "I got my oil from Perry he send me to the food Controller I rote to him he refer me to oil and fat controller I wrote to him and he refer me to oil-seed committee who refer me to you Crist Almighty who will you refer me to?"

A munition worker has been fined for using matches as hairpins. This looks like an act of revenge upon a tobacco-loving husband who had purchased the pins to clear out his pipe.

At Jarrow County Court a holder-up brought a claim against the Mercantile Dry Dock Co. for compensation. Applicant stated that he picked up what he thought was a piece of candle, and it began to burn and melt. His overalls took fire, and he was badly burnt. The Judge returned a verdict for the company, on the ground that the picking up of the substance was not incidental to applicant's employment. So we learn that a holder-up is not supposed to be a picker-up of phosphorus or any other unconsidered trifles.

mitting him to do so." A dyer's labourer (37) stated at Hobden Bridge Tribunal recently that he was first rejected, then classified C3, and afterwards put in Grade 1. He appealed against his latest grading, was sent up again, and placed in Grade 3. Possibly his work had varied so that although at one time he "looked blue," at another he appeared "in the pink."

In a rather belated report of the discussion on scientific glassware at the annual meetings of the Society of Chemical Industry a chemical trade contemporary states that one member "asked if Dr. Travers had had any experience in superimposing wine glasses!" We suppose this error is due to a similarity between the shorthand symbols for "wine" and "Jena"; but it looks like an ironical reference to the difficulty of "superimposing" glasses of wine or any other alcoholic stimulant at the meetings, which, in spite of the interesting nature of the proceedings and the unsettled state of the weather, will be remembered by many as the "Dry Congress."—Oil and Colour Trades Journal.

"I Need Hardly Say

how thankful I was to get out alive, and fully made up my mind that I would write and tell you how useful Dr. Chase's Ointment was," writes a survivor of the Gallipoli Peninsula campaign. "We found that it afforded instant relief from poison from shrubs and bushes, and got to using it for all manner of minor wounds and grazes."

USING THEM ALL. The fiasco of commerce have to burn, the wheels of industry must turn, though all our strong men shoulder a r m s, and leave the cities and the farms, and cross the ocean's briny through, to where the Hun where he gets off. The mills must grind, the forges glow, to light all the young and stalwart go. So any man who has his head may find a place to earn his bread. The cripples who in peaceful days were jostled from our busy ways, have found a useful place at last, wherein they may forget the past. A man may earn his bread and meat though shy of sundry hands and feet. The halt, the spavined and the lame, once more get in life's busy game, and earn their share of useful work, and help to overwhelm the Hun. Old granddad, who's been shelved for years, and who encountered heartless jeers, when he insisted, and repeat, that he was still as good as wheat, has left his chair and impaled his spectacles and dog-eared book, and now he's showing all the town that Oster was a loosed clown. The world won't stand for wasted men, until Sweet Peace comes back again. That member of the human race who has the strength to feed his face, has strength to do some helpful stunt and aid the armies at the front.

From the North.

"CATCH THE THIRD." Some little fuss seems to have arisen in Grand Falls, and at present there is a sort of block on the Magisterial road. Magistrate Fitzgerald does not want to go to Curling, and he seems to have obtained the sympathy of a good many folks in the paper town. A petition has been presented to the Government, we hear, saying that Grand Falls is satisfied with Magistrate Fitzgerald and has no desire to see him. The petitioners point out to the Government that if it has vacancies the proper thing to do is to appoint the new comer to that vacancy and not to conduct a "general post" business. Magistrate Roberts seems to be firmly settled down in the position here, and Magistrate Fitzgerald "stands out." Our late Magistrate, therefore, seems at present to occupy the rather uncomfortable position of the odd man in "Catch the third."

So do Governments play tag with its will servants. Great Governments? Well, sure.

THEY GREASED THE FLOOR.

No man can serve two masters to-day one whit more than he could 200 years ago. One William F. Coakley arose once upon a time, cut some considerable dash and announced that he was the one and only Moses II, who was going to lead the people of Newfoundland out of the wilderness into the promised land of their dreams. He had many followers, for the doctrine he preached was a most popular one, and even those who did not agree with his extravagant claims, looked upon him with a sort of mild admiration for the way he "squared off" at the Big Islands as exemplified by Radd's, Bowring's, etc. They thought that the man who was game to tackle these fellows with no cuts on the post, nor all, the man to protect the poor people.

But, ah me, those days are past. The Big Islanders know better than to meet blow with blow; they know "grease" is much more dangerous to the fighter's feet than blows are to his chest; so they greased the floor, if it one may mix metaphors, they grease the floor.
