

would arise from the construction of the public works which were now going on, and which would be still greater in the next few years. The contractors would, he believed, feel it their duty to assist in the work of immigration in order to get help in the construction of these works. They would be glad to see such a movement as this and to see the societies at home directing their attention not only to the agricultural labourer, but also to the man who proposes to become a settler on the lines, with a view of becoming a settler on the lands which those lines opened up. It was natural that they should expect, at the very late period at which this arrangement would become effective in England this year, that they would only be able to make a beginning. Still, they had hope that it would do some good this year, and that it would be more effective afterwards. Of course, the state of the labor market was uncertain in the old world. If trade should turn out to be very good, and there should be a sufficient employment in the old country, then all knew the earnest desire the inhabitants of that country had to remain as long as they could keep body and soul together, and that plentiful harvests and good wages would diminish the chances of emigration as long as they lasted; but a bad harvest or a block in the labor market would drive the surplus population from home, and they hoped to attract a portion of them to these shores. The Government had learned unofficially that a scheme of assistance to emigrants was being projected by the Government of the Dominion. Of course it would be undesirable that these schemes should clash in any way, and therefore the Government were obliged to reserve some power of modifying the manner of applying that vote. The items of printing and agencies had hitherto been very large. The Government proposed to have their printing for this purpose done in England, and to avail themselves of the services of gentlemen in that country, as lecturers, who had taken much interest in this question, had been in this country with very benevolent intentions, and had made themselves acquainted with the character of the country and the wants of emigrants. They would thus save much expense. The lectures would be delivered in the country towns and places where the agricultural labourer, and those interested in his welfare might best be reached. They believed also that a considerable amount of good was to be obtained by applying to the country press, and utilizing it at a moderate expense on behalf of the agricultural labourer, whom the metropolitan press did not reach. The Government could not give more details, as they had not, since coming into office, had sufficient time to go into all particulars. The vote was an experimental one in many particulars, but they hoped it would be a successful experiment. (Hear, hear.)

THE NINE HOURS MOVEMENT IN HAMILTON.—About 150, nearly all the leading manufacturers, builders and other tradesmen of Hamilton have published a protest against the nine-hours movement for some time going on in that city. They say:—The introduction of such a system would be most disastrous alike to employers and employees by retarding our manufacturing and commercial advancement, giving competitors throughout the Dominion an advantage over us so that Hamilton would lose her now proud position as the first manufacturing city in Ontario, thereby inevitably crippling our industries. They go on to say:—“We feel it our duty to oppose this movement, and not to lessen in any wise the number of hours now constituting a day's work.”

BOGARDUS CHALLENGES WARD.—A. H. Bogardus, champion pigeon shot of America, has published a challenge in this week's Clipper to James Ward, of Toronto. He leads off by an allusion to the mutilation of the snow-birds in the Ward-Day match, and winds up by offering to wager one thousand dollars on the following proposition: He will shoot Ward, at Detroit, at one hundred single pigeons and fifty double rises, allowing Ward the odds of sixteen dead birds on the double rises, and twenty dead birds on the single rises. This is certainly a most liberal offer, and, if backed up, shows immense confidence upon the part of the American champion.

There was a terrible boiler explosion in a factory at St. Helen's, in Lancashire, on Monday morning and many persons were killed.

The estimates of the army expenditure of Great Britain for the current year were laid before the House on Monday night. The total amount is about a million pounds less than the vote of last year.

EDITORIAL ITEMS. It is expected that the prorogation of the Ontario Legislature will take place about the last day of the month.

The American Minister at Paris has been instructed by the Washington Government to negotiate a postal treaty with France.

The Leader announces, apparently on good authority, that the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada will meet for the despatch of business, on Thursday, the 4th of April next.

The Tories in the British House of Lords have abstained from attacking the Gladstone Government on the “American case,” preferring to await the answer to Lord Granville's letter to the Government at Washington.

DUAL REPRESENTATION.—The Globe explaining the operation of the dual representation bill, says:—“Assuming that the Dominion elections take place in the ensuing summer, members of the Legislature who are elected to the House of Commons will be able to discharge their duties during the next session, but no longer, as the Dominion Parliament will, no doubt, be called together at the usual time in the early part of next year.” Mr. Blake and Mr. Mackenzie will, therefore, in all probability, remain in the Legislature of Ontario until the close of the session to commence in November or December of this year.

A CONVENTION of Conservatives will assemble at Mono Mills, on Tuesday, the 5th of March, to select a candidate to represent Cardwell in the next general Legislature. Speaking of the probable candidates, the Orangeville
