Extensive Outbreak of Cattle Disease Reported.

Tree-Planting Legislation Revised and Improved.

Toronto, March 6.—The House did a good afternoon's work yesterday, advancing a couple of Government bills a stage, and passing a good many thousands of dollars in the estimates. One of the Government bills was Mr. Hardy's civic reform bill, which, after an interesting discussion was sent to the municipal committee.

Second readings of Government bills came first, Mr. Dryden moving the second reading of his bill to further improve the Agriculture and Arts Act. He explained the main points touched upon by the bill, pointing out that the change providing that district societies in Toronto, Ottawa, London, Hamilton and Kingston would cause horticultural societies would cause these societies to be best adapted to the conditions in these cities.

Sir Oliver, in reply to Mr. Matheson, said that Mr. Preston, Provincial Librarian, had a right to be an alderman of Toronto, if the people chose him, and the duties of alderman did not interfere with his work as librarian.

Mr. Dryden's bill revising and consolidating the acts relating to tree planting and growing of trees makes a number of changes. Section 2 of the Tree-planting Act, which provided that section 3 of that act should not apply to cities, towns and villages unless declared to be in force by by-law, is repealed, and section 3 now applies to all municipalities.

Mr. Bryce has received a report regarding an extensive outbreak of disease among the cattle in the Province. One of the health officers reports that in one township alone some hundreds of cases of lump jaw have been discovered by the veterinarians, and that the disease among them is due to cut out the tumors, and after sewing up the wounds allow the farmers to ship these cattle to the Toronto market. Although they confess that in many cases these tumors belong to the class of infectious diseases known as actinomycosis, the health officers demand that in the interests of the public health an investigation be made by the Provincial Board. This, the doctor says, is but another indication of the necessity for the compulsory establishment of abattoirs.

Dr. Ryerson is back in the House again after an attack of the flu. He is suffering from loss of voice, however, and is unable to take part in the debates.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Summary of the State of Trade in Canada.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of the Situation.

Toronto, Ont., March 6.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly statement of trade in Canada says:

In Montreal district the weather conditions have tended to the improvement of country roads. Heavy rains have been followed by a drifting snow storm, so that the movement of travelers in the interior have been a good deal impeded, and general country trade has not improved since last week. City dealers have been light buyers so far at the millinery openings, but the outsiders have bought fair parcels, as a rule. There have been a few large buyers in town from the Northwest and British Columbia, notably some representatives of the Alaska Trading Company, who have made considerable purchases of dry goods, clothing, shoes, etc., and who have been much run after. Sugar refiners report inquiry as very slack at the moment, as also do importers of tea and other staple lines. Collections do not improve, and appear to be rather slow, and are reported as frequent. The money market is a little easier; funds seem rather more plentiful, and it is reported some call loans have been offered at five per cent, though some of the banks are still inclined to do business below 5-1/2 per cent.

The condition of trade at Toronto is quiet and featureless. The movement is hardly up to expectations, which is partly accounted for by the severe weather. The feeling, however, seems to be improving in many lines, and with the advent of spring, merchants look forward to an increase of trade. The failures of the week number three, the past week, than during the preceding one, and although remittances are not up to the mark, bankers and wholesalers say that paper has been fairly well met this month. There is little to note with regard to prices. Wheat continues to hold about 80c. at outside points for white and red winter grades. It is somewhat strange that white wheat has been in good demand for milling purposes. It is almost impossible to sell flour at prices relatively 25c. per barrel lower than wheat. There is an easier tendency in the rates for money. It is offering more freely, and the general rate is 5-1/2 per cent. for call loans. Prime commercial paper is discounted at 6 to 7 per cent. Stocks quiet, with a better feeling. There is an improved demand for assurance and bank stocks, the latter for investment.

Failures for the week, 68, as against 88 for same week of last year.

BRADSTREET'S REPORT.

According to Bradstreet's, the improvement in the condition of country trade in Ontario has been followed by a better movement of produce. Dressed hogs, especially, have come out freely during the past week, and grain has shown a moderate movement. Prices of farm staples are not materially changed, excepting those of dressed hogs, which are lower, car lots at $1.75, Montreal, at $1.80, and Toronto at $1.75. Mercantile lines are influenced to some extent by the better produce movement. Wholesale dry-goods business in Toronto has been active in the past week, owing to the presence here of a large number of buyers who were attending the millinery opening. Fourth of March payments were not so bad as the blockaded condition of country roads during the past two weeks led merchants to expect. There have been a good many applications for renewals, but not nearly more than usual. Failures have been numerous in the past month, but are proportionately larger in Toronto than in other points in the Province. Increased competition among the departmental stores here is evidently the cause of the embarrassment of many small traders. Money rates remain about the same. Call loans have an easier tone, 5-1/2 per cent. being now the maximum rate. Commercial loans are quoted at 6 to 7 per cent.

House and Lobby.

Three Conservatives Join Laurier in Opposing Coercion.

Vigorous Denunciation of the Tactics of the Ottawa Cabinet.

A French Liberal Who Says He Will Support the Bill.

Ottawa, March 6.—After three days of talking on the bill for the coercion of Manitoba, it is made evident that the discussion will likely last for days to come, probably till next Friday night.

Mr. Ives, who said he was the representative in the Cabinet of the Protestant minority in Quebec, supported the bill, as providing like justice to the Catholic minority in Manitoba that was given to the Protestants in Quebec. He opposed investigation, and said the men in power at Ottawa were opposed to investigation. Does he, he asked, Mr. Laurier want for any political purpose to keep this sore open, this question unsettled? Does he want to go to the country with this question unsettled?

Mr. Laurier—No. Mr. Ives—I do not think he does. I do not think he is wise if he wants this question kept open. He suggested that the Ontario Legislature should adopt the view of their duty entertained by the Government at Ottawa, and thus take the matter out of Dominion control. He urged the bill for the coercion of Manitoba, and thus have the question disposed of before Easter.

Mr. McNeill asked if there was not a compact between Quebec and Ontario that if separate schools were granted to the minority in Ontario separate schools would be granted to the minority in Quebec.

Mr. Ives—I am not aware that there was ever any compact. They were granted long before Confederation.

Mr. McNeill—Is it not a fact that when Sir Alexander Galt proposed separate schools for the minority in Quebec the reply was that if the minority in Ontario received separate schools, separate schools would be granted to the minority at Quebec?

Sir Adolphe Caron—No; it is not. Mr. McNeill—I have always understood that there was something in the nature of a compact of that kind. I have heard it stated in the House and it has never been contradicted before.

Mr. Craig, Conservative member for Durham, said he had declared each session that while he would support the general policy of the Government, still if legislation of this kind was introduced, he would oppose the measure. Was the House in honor bound to pass such legislation? There were several schools established by law in Manitoba previous to the union. After the union separate schools were instituted and in 1890 the same power which created the schools was used to abolish them. The Government was bound to honor the compact, but was not obliged to grant the minority or issue a remedial order. It was their duty to consider all the circumstances of the case.

Sir Hector Langevin said that the Protestant minority in Quebec were never interfered with in the conduct of their schools. It had been said that if Parliament refused to do justice to the Roman Catholic minority in Quebec, the Roman Catholic minority in Quebec might interfere with the Protestant schools in that Province. Nobody need fear, Quebec would never do that. The majority in Quebec has bound itself to the law, and will not want any difficulty with or to be unjust to the Protestants of Quebec. He declared that the Roman Catholics were satisfied with the bill, a statement which Mr. Choquette, Sir Hector replied that at all events evidently Archbishop Langevin was satisfied with it.

Mr. Sproule (Conservative member for Central Grey) appeared in what to him was an unusual role. The Government has never had a more constant supporter than the member for East Grey, but the vigor with which he handled his old colleagues yesterday was surprising, not to say startling. He set out by expressing regret that the time occupied by the majority in the House of Commons, but members of Parliament owed a duty to their country as well as to their party. He asserted that the sentiment of the country was entirely for the course which the Government had pursued in this matter and that the rank and file of the Conservative party disagreed with it. He pointed out that the Conservative newspapers were arrayed against the Government on this policy, and said in so doing, they were voicing public sentiment. In the North Ontario by-election the Government kept its path from giving a candid answer in regard to the coercion question, or he would have been buried under an adverse majority of 1,600 votes. Public sentiment in Canada was entirely for the Government, the Conservative candidate, so deeply that his political sun was set never to rise again in that constituency at least. The same result had been effected in Montreal, where Jacques Cartier and in almost every constituency where there had recently been a contest. Not until it had gone down to Cape Breton to elect the Secretary of State by a bare majority, by all the power that it could bring to bear, had the Government manufactured sufficient public sentiment to justify what it was doing today. He warned those on the other side that they would have to face an angry electorate, and the men who favored this bill would be left at home. The Government, he said, had made a fatal blunder. Dr. Sproule read from the Confederation resolutions that separate schools were only to be guaranteed to the minorities in Quebec and Ontario. Dr. Weldon—Hear, hear.

Dr. Sproule—in the case of Ontario and Quebec the minorities were guaranteed separate schools because they had those schools when they came into Confederation. But when Manitoba came into Confederation she had no separate schools, and therefore she could not now lay claim to them. He held that this bill would not settle the question, as Mr. Ives had argued, but that the Government would be defeated in the House or in the country.

Mr. Beausoleil, the Liberal member for Berthier, made the first speech in French since the beginning of the debate. He declared his intention of voting against the amendment proposed by Mr. Laurier and in favor of the second reading of the bill. Mr. Greenway had offered if the remedial bill were withdrawn to make certain concessions, but these concessions were not guaranteed, and the Catholic minority would be worse off if they gave up their constitutional rights for concessions that depended merely upon the good-will of Mr. Greenway. He regretted that the bill was not more effective and more radical, nevertheless he thought it afforded the minimum of justice.

Mr. Langelier, Liberal, Quebec Center, supported the policy of his leader. Mr. Langelier said that a simple remedy for the grievance that had been created would have been for the Dominion Government to disallow the Manitoba School Act at the time it was passed. Why had the Government not taken this simple and direct course and avoided all the discord that had resulted? The Government, he thought, had hesitated to disallow the railway legislation of Manitoba or the cattle quarantine act of that Province. Did the Government think it more important to protect cattle than the Roman Catholic minority of Manitoba? The judgment of the Privy Council merely decided that the Government had jurisdiction to take cognizance of the appeal. As to the facts, personally, he was prepared to accept the views of Archbishop Tache, but this was not a legal way to proceed, since the assertions of Archbishop Tache were denied by the Greenway Government. The Dominion Government, after their jurisdiction had been established, should have investigated all the facts of the matter, and thus have reconciled Protestants and Catholics to the course of action. He denounced the present bill as imprudent because business men, for the support of the schools were provided, and an insulting mockery to the Catholics of Manitoba.

Mr. Moncrieff moved the adjournment of the debate at 12:15 o'clock, and the House adjourned.
