Says Parental Unseeing Love

Love Doesn't Demand Perfection-The Eyes of True Love Sees Faults as Well as Virtues-But Our Defects Only Endear Us the More.

A woman asks "Do you have to think people perfect in order to love them?"

Heavens, no! If love required perfections, none of us would Love isn't blind. It has X-ray eyes that see our every defect, but it sees them not as blemishes, but as some quaint characteristic that make us dearer. The very essence of love consists in some one knowing us for exactly what we good and fine for this wicked world. Undoubtedly, in the days of courtship, her lover perjured himself like gentleman and told her all these hings that she was longing to hear. But the man knows at the time that he is lying, and the woman would know it, too, if she would permit Mount Brydges and herself to face the truth for a moment. For she is perfectly well aware that no man who had sense enough to be permitted abroad without a keeper could have such a delusion about her No man, for even a passing glance, thinks a plain woman beautiful, nor a dull one brilliant, nor a fat one thin, nor does he mistake a redheaded, snappy-eyed woman for a meek and patient Griselda.

He doesn't love her for something she isn't, but for the thing she is. He sees the snub nose and the hay-colored hair; he knows that she isn't going to set the world on fire, and that many a time he is going to have to walk on eggs to keep from riling her.

But, all the same, there is something in her plain face that makes a greater hit with him than any living picture; something that soothes him in her unexciting babble; something that makes him feel he'd rather fight with her than live in peace with another

That's the love of a man for a woman. Something that says: "With all thy faults I love thee still."

And it's the same way with women. Probably no woman would ever get a husband if she didn't make some man think that she thought him General Pershing and Otis Skinner and Rudolph Valentino and Mr. Rockefeller and Solomon, all rolled into one, and that she couldn't find a fault in his whole make-up if she hunted for it with a microscope.

But that's press-agent stuff. That's campaign literature. There isn't a man living clever enough and subtle enough to fool a girlbaby while she is still in the cradle about what he is. Every woman has got the number of every man she has known for an hour, down to the last figure, and she knows him better than he

Do you think that the bride who swears at the altar to take a man for worse believes that it is all better and no worse in hers? Not much. Do you think she thinks that some little, sawed-off, egotistical chap, who talks too much about himself, is a tall, modest, reserved hero? She just doesn't care about how he looks to others because he looks good to her, and he can't bore her talking about himself because he's the one subject in the world she's the most interested in. And that's that. Male Quartete sang the musical num-

We don't demand perfection in those we love. We don't really good who are most loved; it is the poor, blundering sinners. It's the prodigals that we are always getting out the brass band and slaying the fatted calf for, not the austere saints.

And perhaps the reason for this is because we have no kinship, no fellowship with the faultless. We need forgiveness so often ourselves that we love best those who are in our own class, and who also have a fellow-feeling for us because they likewise do not grade up too high.

This is why men and women seldom marry their ideals, and why we choose for friends "poor Fanny" or "poor Mary," who are always making ridiculous blunders, and "poor John" and "poor Tom," whom we are always pulling out of the holes they get themselves into, but whom we love better than we do better men and women.

The only time when love is blind is when parents look at their children. Then, indeed, we see people afflicted with an astignatism that renders them incapable of seeing the thing that is before their

We see parental love so blind that it cannot behold in its offspring the faults that are patent to the world. We see parents who really believe homely girls beautiful; neglected girls belles; runty little children withadenoids marvels of childish grace and fascination; who hear the music of the spheres in their children's screeching, and who see nothing but playful spirit in their children's destruction of property.

It is because parental love is blind that fathers and mothers fail to see their children's faults and correct them, and so wreck many a life that might have been of use to the world. It is only parental love that is blind. All other love sees and loves. But parental love loves without seeing. DOROTHY DIX. Copyright, 1923, by Public Ledger Company.

It Is Easy to Lose An Unsightly Complexion

Have you ever exclaimed as you be Have you ever exclaimed as you beheld your complexion in the mirror: "If I only could tear off this old skin!"
And do you know you can do that very thing? Not to actually remove the entire skin all of a sudden; that would be too heroic a method, and painful, too. The wornout cuticle comes off in such tiny particles, and so gradually, it doesn't hurt a bit. Little by little the beautiful complexion underneath comes forth. No matter how muddy, rough, blotchy or freckled your complexion, you can surely discard it by this simple process. Just get an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at your druggist's, apply nightly like cold cream, washing it off mornings. The result will be traly marvelous.—Advt.
