Britain and France Not Unlikely to Enter Into an Alliance.

London, Jan. 11.—In view of the assembling of the British fleet for active service and the many clouds hovering over the horizon of politics, the cabinet meeting held at Downing Street to-day is entitled to rank as one of the most momentous in the history of Great Britain. The ministers had to make decisions upon several questions of vital importance to the British Empire, including the Transvaal, Armenian and Venezuelan difficulties, and Great Britain's position towards the other European powers. It is a striking fact that although the as the waves are salt.

This may be our Armageddon: Seas may purple with blood and flame

As we go to our rest forever, leaving the world a name.

What matter? There have been none like undoubtedly Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, the formerly much abused Radical leader, whose able treatment of the recent colonial difficulties have excited the admiration of even his most violent opponents.

It is impossible not to remark the wonderful change of feeling towards him in the Radical press, which only lately scarcely ever referred to him without calling him "Judas." Now the Radical editors have nothing but the warmest eulogies for the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and he might also be described as a popular hero at the present moment. The latest advices from the Transvaal would seem on their face to indicate that the situation is in no way so hopeful as it was a couple of days ago, in spite of official statements to the contrary, and it is believed that the cabinet is considering most unlooked for demands upon the part of President Kruger, demands which it is intimated Great Britain cannot possibly concede. The reports of the deadlock in the negotiations between Sir Hercules Robinson, governor of Cape

This may explain the reported purchase of Delagoa Germany's sympathy, and if necessary, Bay from Portugal by the government of Great Britain. Another feature of the situation is the feeling that France, President Kruger during the latter's than usual. Unfortunately the very than usual. Unfortunately the very than usual. It is practically certain that the disaster occurred during Wednesday night, for when the Princess Louise passed the Point on her way to Alberni, Thursday evening, the topsails were still set on the big vessel although she was piled high up on the rocky shore with the breakers outside. The ship did not appear to be in immediate danger, according to the report made by Captain

John Irving on his arrival at Alberni. "There is no danger of her going to pieces just now," said the last telegram received from the Commodore. "The crew signalled to us but we could not render them any assistance on account of the high sea and the approaching darkness."

It is altogether likely that the Louise will pick up the shipwrecked crew on her return trip upon which she is ex-

VANCOUVER, Jan. 11.-The case of Cranston vs. Capt. Bird, of the S.S. Warrimoo and James Huddart, manager of the Can adian line, was in progress all day yester day and to-day. Cranston, who is an Amday and to-day. Cranston, who is an American subject, is suing for $50,000 damages. The case is on before Justice Drake and a jury. According to the evidence Capt. Bird was asked by the Hawaiian government to carry Cranston to Vancouver, the government paying his passage. Capt. Bird said to those representing the public of Hawaii that he must get a letter from them indemnifying him from blame. This of Hawaii that he must get a letter from them indemnifying him from blame. This chiefly on account of his being advised to do so by the British consul, the American consul raising no objections. Cranston was forcibly placed on board and accompanied out of the harbor by a Hawaiian guard. Cranston swears that all those who took their oath that he was a menace to the republic and had sided against them in the Johnson, the deported Englishman, and C.
