The Turkish License Law.

From a Constantinople Letter.

The foreign population is greatly exercised over the new license law, by which the gevernment proposes to levy a tax, in the in every detail, and states that the wheat crop in his locality is the very best seen in Canada within his remembrance, while all shape of a license fee, upon all foreigner doing business in the country, as they do now upon natives. In itself, it is not an Canada within his tentenchart they have root crops promise better than they have for tweety-five years. The process of "rounding up" upon the me care from every hand. The condi ion is that foreigners should be held amenable to Turkish tribunals without the right of representation by their consulate. The circumstances are the notorious corrup-tion of the tribunals. There is, in fact, hardly the pretense of justice. There is a case new before the highest court of appeal. A man from Mosul, in Mesopotamia, a wealthy merchant, secured the hatred of a prominent ecclesiastic. The The hay crop is now nearly all cut, and by the end of next week all in this vicinity will be housed. the hatred of a prominent ecclesisatic. The latter entered into a plot with one of the government officials to bring a false claim against the merchant. The case was quickly settled in the provincial court, and the merchant appealed to Constantinople, put-ting his case into the hands of a well knowr English lawyer. Here it has gone from one court to another, and is at last at the highest. The Mosul official has a brother connacted with the tribunals here. He met the merchant and told him frankly. "your case is perfectly plain, your right is clear, but if you win my brother is ruined. There-fore I shall fight you with all my might." What the end will be nobody knows. It is hardly strange that foreigners are not anxious to come before such goourts, for this is but a common and by no means aggra-vated case—without the protection of their consulate. A KINESS City despatch says that a soka-ing rain has fallen over the southern and central parts of the state, and insures the largest yield of corn ever known. Oats are also very abundant, many fields yielding over 100 bushels to the acre. Wheat is ex-ceeding expectation, some fields threshing over 42 bushels per acre.
