The Three Gallant Gentlemen in Concert:  Ah, Miss, Can I Relieve You of Your Satchel?"

Million Dollars—The Whole Story Told in a Brief Table.

The main business before the Street Railway Committee was the receiving of the report of City Treasurer Coady, City Solicitor Biggar and Cisso Engineer Jennings on the fluaucial advantages of the various tenders.

The chairman, acting on the advice of the City Engineer, thought that at this stage the presence of the press and the public might be dispensed with, but the committee was carried unanimously.

The chairman with the committee was a long discussion.

Messrs. Mills, Edgar and others pointed out that the committee was an inquisitorial one and possessed of higher powers than any ordinary judicial body. No member of the

Mr. Tarte then proceeded to examine witness, asking him if he produced all the obooks, checks and other correspondence which were pertinent to the inquiry. Michael Connoily replied that he had done so. On being oidered to produce these books he refused any examination whatever. No. 2 (the Miller-Pew) tender was also informal in the opinion of the triumvirate, in that it had lacked the required deposit, but nevertheless it was deemed worthy of an analytical examing in the committee.
