Pump Will Lift or Draw Water—The Conditions Required for Perfect Science
—Science in Brief.

The distance that a pump will lift or draw water, as it is termed, is about 33 feet, because water of analysis has a summer of analysis for the conditions of the condition draw water, as it is termed, is about 33 feet, because water of one-inch area 33 feet weighs 1.47 pounds; but pumps must be in good order to lift 33 feet, and all pipes must be air-tight. Pumps will give better satisfaction lifting from 22 to 25 feet. There are many things to be considered in locating steam pumps, such as the source from which the water is obtained, the point of delivery, and the quantity required in given time; whether the water is to be lifted or flowed to the pump; whether it is to be forced directly into the boiler, or raised into a tank 25, 50, or 100 teet above the pump.

When purchasing a steam pump to supply a steam boiler, one should be selected capable of delivering one cubic foot of water per horse power per hour.

No pump, however good, will lift hot ause water of one-inch area 33 feet | street.

No pump, however good, will lift hot base. from the barrel of the pump the vapor occupies the space, destroys the vacuum, and interfers with the supply of water. As a result of this the pump knocks. When it becomes necessary to pump hot water, Dowall's blue rock shoot yesterday, the lead-the pump should be placed below the supply, so that the water may flow into the and $5, being captured by Mr. McDowall,

THE BIGGEST MISTAKE IN THE real estate business is that of asking "boom" prices for property. The half of the city appears to be in the market, judging by the advertisements in the papers. Yet when a capitalist comes to the front to purchase a business property or a decent homestead, the prices are too often shot up to a prohibitory point, turning away buyers and preventing business, besides often resulting in loss and to the disadvantage of all concerned.
