

critic, who at the close gave a very good criticism of the evening's proceedings. He blamed the debaters for not giving more time to the preparation of their speeches. The meeting was brought to a close by a motion to adjourn.

ALEX. MACGREGOR.

OUR EXCHANGES.

In the Theologue for December is an article by Principal Pollock on "An Old Scottish Psalm Book," in course of which strong objection is taken to some of the proposed changes suggested in connection with our new hymnal. We quote, "To break up the Psalter into portions is to take liberties with an inspired book, hallowed by the devotions of thousands of years. To scatter the Paraphrases is to interfere with the plan of the whole collection, which is didactic and instructive." Rev. Jas. McCoy, of Chatham, explains the conditions and purposes of the Aged and Infirm Ministers' Fund, while some loyal Scot who signs himself "K" reviews that most popular book, "The Days of Auld Lang Syne."

The Christmas number of the King's College Record was very attractive. It contained some good articles, along with excellent illustrations of the College buildings and vicinity.

The initial number of Massey's Magazine came to hand in January. It is well gotten up and very readable. Among its articles we notice a criticism of the tragedy of Macbeth by T. M. MacIntyre, Ph. D. An article descriptive of the Canadian canal at Sault Ste. Marie, by Chas. Gordon Rogers, and a poem by Prof. Roberts. The magazine deserves well at the hands of the reading public.