

These services together are well placed to inform Canadian companies about their rights under international trade and investment protection rules, and they can identify policy problems that limit the freedom of Canadian business to expand. The international network of embassies and consulates assesses how other governments implement the disciplines they have accepted and advises the Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade's Trade, Economic and Environmental Policy Branch about new issues. Each department brings its particular expertise to the network, providing service to the client and policy advice to the government.
