

which was Bank Holiday I would have said it had no value. However I have discerned that the class of visitors is not always as bad as on the holidays. For the individual universities I can see no particular advantage but I do think that many people of the right sort are now more willing to go to Canada because they realize that there are good educational institutions there. From my experience I think the agricultural colleges should have contributed more to the exhibit. There is not a single view nor a scrap of information about Macdonald College and I have had several enquiries about agricultural colleges. The idea of farming in Canada seems to have captured the imaginations of large numbers of people here.

I am living at the Duchess of Cornwall Memorial Hotel where there are a number of Canadians.
 It is not very grand but I have met a large number of Canadians here and it is quite central.

Yours truly
 H. R. L. Denis