

stranger to settle in the colony without a licence—Petitioning the King called slandering the brethren—Punishment of Morton, Sir Christopher Gardner, and Ratcliffe—Morton publishes a satire at Amsterdam—Returns to Massachusetts—Is fined and banished again—Intimate connection between their Church and State—The King orders several vessels in the Thames to be put under embargo—A House of Representatives meets in Boston, and is admitted as a branch of the Legislature—The Governor is not re-elected, and is made to account for his expenditure of the public moneys—His manly conduct on the occasion—A code of laws ordered to be compiled—Also a uniform system of Church Discipline. . . . 52

CHAPTER V.

A commission issues to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and eleven other persons, for governing the colonies, &c.—Abbot and Laud, their conduct contrasted—Severe trials of the Church—Its character and conduct—Colonists assume the right of making treaties—Free-Trade with the Narragansetts—Offer of hereditary rank made by Lord Saye and Sele—Reasons for declining it—Petition of the people debarred of civil rights for nonconformity—They are summoned to appear before the Governor and Assistants, and denounced by the Ministers—Heavily fined and bound over to keep the peace—Their private papers searched, and a memorial found addressed to the Earl of Warwick—Its contents—The people extend their jurisdiction to Weathersfield, situated beyond the limits of Massachusetts—Justification of encroachment—Gorton's settlement broken up, and his followers severely punished—The Grand Council of Plymouth surrenders