Here is the experience of a young married woman who for the past two years has kept an accurate account of the money she has spent irrespective of household expenditures. The result is most surprising to her as well as informing, and may be interesting to others.

We all realize in a vague sort of way that it is not our larger expenditures so much as the aggregate smaller ones that take the most money. This generally means little unless we have figures to bring it home to us. For the sake of economy we may go without a new suit or hat, or some desired thing which costs a considerable sum at the moment, and in a comparatively short time spend the entire amount on trifles that are not necessary and that we could more easily have gone without than the coat or hat.

There are many people who would not even dream of subscribing to six or eight different standard periodicals for the year because of the expense, and yet before each month is out they have at one time or another bought every one of them at the full retail price.

It was reflections of this kind which prompted this particular woman to find out just what poor economy she might be guilty of in the spending of money, so she began by recording in a note-book all her expenditures. This soon got to be a very tedious proceeding and since she found herself entering such varied items as carfare, church money, candy, wedding presents, evening gowns, matinee tickets and umbrellas, all in one jumble, the result was simply the total amount of money spent.

Grouping the Various Expenses.

Determined that her accounts should mean something more to her than mere reminder of extravagance she purchased an ordinary large size school composition book and ruling five columns on each page wrote these headings at the top: Clothes; Personal; Sundries; Car-fare and Cab-hire; Charity.

At the close of each day she entered her expenditures in their respective columns. Under "Clothes" appeared dressmaking and tailor's bills and every article of wearing apparel from stockings to opera cloaks. Under "Personal," she listed manicuring, hairdressing, writing-paper, matinee tickets, hotel luncheons, jewelry, in short, all those things which were essentially expenditures for herself. In the "Sundries" column she placed everything not included in the regular household expenses--cost of moving, tips, express charges, trunks, etc.; and in the fourth and fifth columns respectively, each day's car-fare and cab-hire, and the money given to beggars, to the church and general charities.

A space was left at the bottom of each page for totals and these were carried forward to the top of the columns on the next page, so that she could at any time tell at a glance just how much money she had spent to date. At the close of the year the totals not only greatly astonished her, but provided her with information which helped her to spend her money to better advantage in the future.

She was a woman of generous impulses as regards charity, and she was not extravagantly inclined to use cabs when a street car would answer the purpose, and yet to her amazement and chagrin she discovered that she had given to the poor about one-sixth of what it had cost her for car-fare and cab-hire! The total amount spent for clothes was most reasonable considering the appearance she was called upon to make, but here again she was surprised, since the aggregate items showed plainly where she could have purchased to better advantage.

The Tell-tale "Personal" Account. But it was the personal column that interested her most. She had always thought that outside of her clothes she was provided with very little pocket-money. A neighbor had once confided to her that her husband made her an allowance of so much per year--just pocket-money for candy, matinee tickets and manure. The sum had seemed to her friend most generous and she had felt a bit abused to think she had so much less. In fact, had it been offered to her then she would have been content. But her first year's accurate personal account showed that she had spent for her own indulgence nearly half again as much as the yearly sum she had so greatly envied her neighbor.

The total of the sundries column revealed the fact that a considerable hole had been made in her husband's bank account by the odds and ends which she had imagined could make no impression on it at all.

The next year she kept her accounts as usual, but spent with a great deal more care and thought, the gratifying result being that she paid out considerably less than she had a great deal more to show for it.

The Nursery

We seldom reap the rewards of child-training until after the trained one has ceased to be a child. Usually during the years when the children are small the mother's greatest joy is the joy of service and more work; but the value of the time and labor spent during these formative years is realized only when the parents see the result of their work in the fully developed character of the grown-up boy and girl. Young men and women must go out alone to fight their way thru life, but they have been prepared by the early formation of good habits and the correct training of their instincts. They have begun right, and the law of continuity will keep them so.

For older children good biographies are splendid books to assist in this training. It is inspiring to a boy to read how great men in the political or scientific world have advanced step by step in their progress towards greatness. It is inspiring to a girl to read how great women in the world have advanced step by step in their progress towards greatness. Such literature brings to him the fact that there is no "luck" about real success, but that every man's fortune is made by his own efforts. A motto that I have found popular among boys and girls is: "This world is a mirror, and reflects only me."

Conservation Leaders to Speak.

YOUNG MEN WERE ORDAINED AT CATHEDRAL

Rev. Patterson Smyth Preached to Capacity Audience at St. Alban's, and Gave Sound Advice to New Deacons and Priests, as Well as to the Congregations.

All records were broken at St. Alban's Cathedral Sunday morning, when 26 young men were ordained to the Anglican ministry, 14 as deacons and 12 as priests. The ceremony was performed by His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto, and assisting him were the Rev. Patterson Smyth of St. George's, Montreal; Canon Macnab, Archdeacon of the Diocese, and the Rev. E. H. Taylor. The church was filled to overflowing for the service, which lasted nearly three hours.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Patterson Smyth, who made an eloquent appeal to the novice clergymen to realize the solemnity and the responsibility of their charge. Their mission, he said, was to bring the message of God to the present service world upon them the outward commission of the church. It was a charge from which there was no escape, but one which offered the greatest possibilities for human betterment and Christian work.

The Manner of Man. "I have often pointed out to young students," he said, "that there is no profession in the world where the personal element--the man's own self--matters as it does with us. It is not that matters, but rather the real duties of the man that is behind the duties. It is not the method of the sermon or the class teaching, but the personality that is behind the sermon and the class teaching. O my young brothers, at any cost keep close to your Lord and watch over your spiritual life, the true, genuine men, humbly trying to please your Lord and caring not for anything else besides."

The Laid Responsible. The preacher, however, thought that the following were ordained as deacons: G. R. Bracken, J. L. Cotton, L. A. Dickson, W. E. Egan, F. S. Ford, S. Ferguson, Frank Herman, C. E. Luce, G. S. McGiffin, Edward Morris, N. H. Noble, Charles Patterson Smyth, E. B. Taylor and W. S. Blithe.

Those Ordained. Those ordained as priests were: The Rev. John H. Colclough, Rev. Walter Ellis, Rev. Richard A. Forde, Rev. Henry G. Kingston, Rev. R. S. Mason, Rev. Edward Morley, Rev. W. A. Penn, Rev. A. H. Powell, Rev. C. E. Pratt, Rev. Y. C. Speiser and Rev. A. Strathairn.

Brakeman's Injuries Fatal. CORNWALL, June 2.-(Special.)--Ernest Dorion, Montreal, a brakeman on a Grand Trunk freight train, died in the Hotel Dieu Hospital here yesterday as the result of an accident which occurred at Lancaster station. Shunting was being done and Dorion had one of his feet caught in the point of the switch. The train backed upon him before he could free himself and both legs were almost severed close to the hip. His body was also badly mangled.

Announcement

As the public may judge, we have suffered much by inaccuracies in reports in the press and by misrepresentations through many sources since the unfortunate accident at our factory, but now that five of Toronto's leading Architects-Engineers-Builders have pronounced as follows, we are able to announce that our business will continue uninterrupted, and that we will be well able to take care of the demands for our goods. Neilson's Ice Cream is sold through 700 druggists and confectioners in the city, and at 500 points in Ontario. Neilson's chocolates can be obtained at 2,000 dealers throughout the Dominion.

"We, the undersigned, have thoroughly examined the Neilson building from basement to parapet, and have found no evidence whatever of structural weakness. We would strongly recommend the immediate proper reconstruction of the south wall and the completion of the remainder of the building. Acting upon our instructions, the Neilson Company have applied loads to the third, fourth and fifth floors, also the roof adjoining the north wall, from 25 per cent. to 40 per cent. in excess of the loads permitted by the City Architect for this building, and upon careful and thorough examination no change or evidence of weakness was found anywhere."

"We believe this to be an absolutely fair test, and to show conclusively that the building is properly constructed and capable of being occupied for the business for which it was built. We do not hesitate in making this statement, as our examination has been most thorough, and we consider the building absolutely safe and in condition to be occupied continuously from this time forth."

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY

Exercise great care over your actions or trouble will follow. It is well to curb a natural desire for social excitement and pleasure and devote more time to serious affairs, as your business will need attention. Those born to-day will be brilliant and well liked, but too talkative. They should learn to think carefully before they give opinions. With this training, a successful career is indicated.

The lathy were largely responsible for the work and the efficiency of their pastors. "Try to treat your clergy as Christ their Lord is treating them," he said. "Try to make the best and think the best, and hope the best of them. That is the way to get the best out of them. Try to give them your friendship. You little know how lonely some of your clergy often feel in Canada."

"It was the clergyman's duty," he said, "to let the people know that they were not forgotten. People are deeply interested in God and righteousness," he declared, "and if they know that you are a poor, humble fellow of Christ, really, honestly wanting to help them, you are going to have very happy friendships in your new life."

PUBLIC AMUSEMENTS

"The Road to Yesterday." Novelty of idea, splendid comedy and an unusually clever and sustained vein of satire on the romantic melodrama are the chief characteristics of the comedy of fantasy, "The Road to Yesterday," which Miss Percy Haswell announces as the attraction at the Alexandra Theatre, this week, commencing to-night. The play is by Beulah M. Dix and Evelyn G. Sutherland. Its first and last acts take place in a modern London studio, the second and third acts represent the people there, disclosed as they live, or might have lived three hundred years ago in the Elizabethan England. It happens in the dream of Elsie Tyrell, a young American girl, who is full of the ideal of historic novels and romantic melodrama, that this wandering on the road to yesterday takes place. Miss Haswell plays the part of this dreamer with unusual humor, charm and intelligence. The musical portions will be given on Wednesday. For this engagement, Miss Haswell has secured the original incidental music composed by "The Road to Yesterday" which will be rendered by a complete orchestra.

"The Wolf" at the Grand. The Phillips-Shaw Company, which has just completed a three years' engagement at the Marlboro Theatre, Chicago, will open a summer engagement at the Grand Opera House on Monday next presenting Eugene Walt's famous Canadian play, "The Wolf." For this attraction a special summer scale of prices will be put into effect. In the evenings the prices will be fifty and twenty-five cents, while for the two matinees on Wednesday and Saturday one price only will be charged, twenty-five cents to any part of the house. This company has always been identified with the production of high-class royalty plays and the principals, Albert Phillips and Miss Lella Shaw, have always been given for support the best stock people available. Special scenic equipment will be provided for each production, and the company are assured of a high-grade entertainment at summer prices. Seats for the evening performance can be reserved one week in advance.

E. H. Sothorn and Julia Marlowe. Seats Sale To-day. Preparations have been completed to handle the opening of the advance sale this morning at the Alexandra Theatre for the Sothorn and Marlowe engagement. As these noted exponents of Shakespearean characters only remain in Toronto three days, there will doubtless be a big rush for seats. The repertoire is: Monday night, "Taming of the Shrew"; Tuesday night, "Romeo and Juliet"; Wednesday matinee, "The Merchant of Venice"; Wednesday night, "Hamlet."

Columbia Burlesques. The attraction this week at the Gayety Theatre will be the Columbia Burlesques, which consists of a vaudeville entertainment and a two-act burlesque entitled, "A Parisian Temptation," staged by Leo Stevens. Numerous charming young women and jolly comedians furnish the sublime and ridiculous, while over the whole there is ever present that artistic perfection found only in shows of that caliber.

Two New Burlesques. Two new bright, clean and breezy burlesques will be put on by the Star Theatre Burlesque Stock Company that are sure to leave a pleasing and lasting impression on every patron who visits the performance. Billy Spencer heads the list of 40 artists that are each a headliner in his or her own part. On Tuesday a new jubilee for the chorus girls will be arranged.
