A large shipment of apples is now being made in Chatham by Mr. O'Keefe, Harwich, 15 cars being shipped to England by the new steamer Canada. The freight sheds at the C. P.R. and G.T.R. are packed with apples. Mr. O'Keefe stated that the reason the farmers cannot sell their apples is that too great a risk is being run by the shippers on account of the stormy weather that is experienced by the transatlantic steamers. Lately the demand for apples in England was greatly increased, but the storm on the English coast has lessened it considerably. Prospects are very bright at present, and it is not unlikely that apple raisers will be able to dispose of their crops.

England's Lamented Prelate. The Archbishop of Canterbury's Remains Interred Beneath the Old Historic Cathedral -General Mourning Throughout Great Britain.

Canterbury, England, Oct. 16 .-- There is general mourning throughout Great Britain today. Bells have been tolling almost everywhere, and memorial services in honor of the memory of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, and Primate of All England, the Most Rev. Edward White Benson, D.D., who died suddenly in Hawarden Church on Sunday last, while attendhundreds of churches, while, lying in state, the remains of the deceased prelate were watched throughout by toonist and humorist; Albert E. Smith, polyphonist and shadowgraphist, and Miss Grace A. Green, New York's Augustine school; and it was the occasion for the wending around the aisles of the vast edifice a continuous range-stream of clergy, notabilities and members of all classes of society, Cin-rich and poor, all bent upon taking a last farewell glance at the casket closed containing the body of the venerable and well-loved priest, whose tragic death, while the guest of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, caused such a sensation on Monday.

AN HISTORIC SPOT. The old cathedral, in which Thomas Becket was slain at the altar, and which contains the tomb of the Black Prince, and the monuments of Henry IV. and Queen Joan, and Archbishops Kemp, Stratford, Sudbury, Chicheley, Mourchier, and others, the cloisters in which Henry II. did penance in sackcloth two years after Becket's death. and many other relics of English history, looked cold, dismal and forbidding. Rain was falling outside, the atmosphere within the huge edifice was heavy and charged with moisture. Primate's throne was heavily draped with violet velvet, on which was richly embroided the arms of the See of Canterbury, on a silver ground. The floor about the grave was covered with scarlet cloth, and the grave itself was lined with violet velvet. The doors of the cathedral were besieged at the earliest hours, in spite of the rainy weather, and the strong police force was reinforced by a squadron of the Sixteenth Lancers, who did sentry duty around the old building, while the ceremonies lasted.

THE SERVICES. The religious services began o'clock in the morning, when the Dean Huron which has in view the liquida- William Farrar, D.D., celebrated Holy of Canterbury, the Ven. The principal service began at 12:30 p.m., with a crowd of most distinguished people present, in addition to the throngs which filled the cathedral to the most distant corner

THE PROCESSION. The funeral procession, which was rendered more imposing in appearance by the presence of a guard of honor from the Sixteenth Lancers, one of the most attractively uniformed regiments of the British army, formed in the cloisters. It was composed of the clergy of the Diocese of Canter-bury, in full robes; the rural deans, delegations from the Diocese of Truro, the House of Lords and the House of Commons, large numbers of church dignitaries and representatives of Cambridge University, the Lord Lieutenant of Kent, 20 bishops, 50 canons, the Archbishop of Dublin, Dean Farrar, the Archbishop of York, the Rev. Hugh Benson, and the officers of the
