MISCELLANEOUS SELECTIONS.

Suppose a Field
of the shape of this figure to belong to 4 people,
who are desirous
of dividing it amongst them, in such a way that each portion shall be of the same shape as the original field. How is this to be done?

The following trifles are numbered, as we shall give their solutions
in our next:—

No. 1.

From six take nine, from nine take ten; —
From forty take fifty, and SIX will remain.

No. 2.

To one hundred and one, six and
fifty unite,
You'll find I am courteous, attentive polite.

No. 3.

Before a circle fifty trace,
And after it set four;

Five hundred next must find a place,
Then a circle and four more.
Place these aright, and in the sequel,
You'll find a Town which has no equal.

No. 4.

Let eight dots be placed at equal distances from each other, as below,
and then, without taking off the pen or retracing any part, enclose the whole in a flourish or figure, which shall resemble a double heart.

CHARADES.

First.

My first the guard of peasant's lonely
cot,
And of my next is happiness the lot;
My whole a harmless form remains,
Of iron laws and slavery's chains.
