After marrying a couple, a negro pastor was frequently taken aside by the bridegroom and asked, "How much do I owe you?" He had performed such a ceremony when the bridegroom, a flachy dressed negro who had ex-perienced a great deal of emotion while the knot was being tied, whispered in his ear: "Parson, what do I owe you for

CORK HUNGER STRIKERS
TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Cork, Aug. 20.—Four hunger strikers in the Cork jail were removed this afternoon to the city hospital. Fearing that the hunger strikers will die, Deputy Lord Mayor O'Callahan has written to Cardinal Logue, the archibishop, the lord mayors and the mayors of Ireland, calling their attention to the situation.

ALL IN THE WAY YOU SAY IT

Irish Schoolmaster—Now, Patrick, what is a lake?

Patrick—Plaze, sorr, a lake is a kettle wid a hole in it.

Fashions in pet dogs, in cats, in canaries, change as rapidly almost as do fashions in gowns, ribonos and hats. It's all a state of mind, and if any one feels inclined to discredit this statement he should spend a few hours in a dog shop and see how much psychology affects buying and selling. The fact that pets are viewed by would-be owners as adjuncts of costume and a final elebotration of the ritual of doing the correct thing under all circumstances certainly influences the variety that becomes popular and saleable. Just at present the proprietors of one fashionable shop in uptown New York say that the favorites are Pekingese Chows and wire-haired terriers. Pomeranians, once the aristocrats of dogdom's "four hundred," are falling back in their popularity, and the smooth coated fox terriers so long and so deservedly high in esteem are more difficult to sell mow. Police dogs and Airedales, which won their spurs in the war and endeared themselves to the men who knew their feats of bravery and their marvelous intelligence in times of peril and stress, have created a demand for themselves, both outside and inside the world of fashion and passing fancy.
