Premier Borden's Statement.

The following statement was issued by Sir Robert Borden tonight:

The supporters of the government met in caucus this morning at 10.30 octock and continued in session until 1. They met again this afternoon at 4.30 and continued in session until 7.

From first to last the spirit of the caucus was magnificent and inspiring. With practical unanimity, the decision was reached to stand together, and, by united effort, to maintain stable government. There was a very frank and full discussion of all the subjects considered, and every member who spoke expressed his perfect confidence in the government and his pride in its record.

dence in the government and his pride in its record.

It was decided that the supporters of the government should unite themselves into a party to be known as the National Liberal and Conservative party. The policy of the party, which had been considered and tentatively approved at previous meetings, was finally adopted, and is now given to the public. At the forenoon meeting, the prime minister addressed the caucus at some length. He reviewed the direumstances which led to the formation of the present administration; he emphasized the supreme purpose which hought together men who had formerly opposed each other in the politiarena; he dwelt upon the fulfil-nt of its pledges, and he describ-the conditions which confronted diers and supporters of the gov-ment upon the conclusion of peace.

The prime minister expressed to the caucus his deep regret at long absence, enforced by ill-health, and he explained the circumstances under which, at the earnest solicitation of his colleagues, he bad decided, at the beginning of the way to the the beginning of the year, to test the effects of a prolonged respite from work. In the end he announced his mability to sustain longer the very jervy burdens and vast responsibilities imposed upon him as prime minister, and he asked the members of the caucus to give him the honorable discharge to which he felt he was entitled.

discharge to which he felt he was entitled.

Afull summary of the prime minister's address will be given to the press tomorrow. Sir Robert Borden was very deeply moved by the tribute of affection and esteem which was given to him in overflowing measure by the great gathering of senators and members, and he acknowledged, with deep feeling the unanimous appreciation of his services and regret at his approaching retirement.

The arrangements proposed for the selection of a new leader were regarded as entirely satisfactory, and were unanimously approved by caucus. It is anticipated that these arrangements will not occasion any serious delay in the choice of a successor, who, of course, cannot commence his duties until after the formal resignation of Sir Robert Borden has taken place, nor until the name has been submitted to his excellency the governor-general and has been approved by him.

For the purpose of encouraging the fullest development of our natural resources, the tariff should be so adjusted as to permit machinery and the implements of production to be purchased at prices that will compare equitably with those paid in other countries for similar articles. The revised tariff law should be so framed and administered as to effectively prevent any custom duty being used to facilitate the formation or maintenance of any combine, trust, association or agreement among manufacturers, dealers or producers for the purpose at the expense of the general public, of restraining trade, preventing competition or unduly enhancing the selling price of any article of commerce.

The principle of trade preference between the different members of the Britannic commonwealth should be maintained and extended from time to time to such degree as may be found practicable and comsistent with Canadian interests.

Platform Not Ready.

At eight o clock, the nour set for the reassembling of the convention, the platform would not get under way for some time. In anticipation of the prombition fight, the convention hall was packed at the appointed hour. Friends of W. J. Bryan, recalling threats of bodily narm made upon him at Baltimore in 1912 had arranged to be prepared to defend their champion in case ht should be emparalled in the heat of the battle of the wets and drys.

At eight fifty the platform committee reported it was still not ready.

On motion of Delegate Linebaugh, the convention went into a temporary recess while the state delegations caucused to name their national committeemen and national committee women. Most of them already have been selected and their announcement in that fashion was principally a time-killing proposition, while the platform committee continued to work.

principally a time-killing proposition, while the platform committee continued to work.

While all this was going on the efforts of the combination attempting to form against the nomination of William G. McAdoo was at work and reports which came to the convention hall said it had decided to center on Cox for the present. The McAdoo people on the other hand were predicting that their candidate "would go over the top before the fifth ballot." They claimed the backing of many prominent admir stration leaders, who are on the ground here.

Word came down from the platform committee that if good fortune prevailed there might be a report about 19,30 o'clock on the prohibition fight, and it might be agreed to have only two speakers. Mr. Bryan on the one side and Bainbridge Colby on the other.

The meaning of this was that the platform committee could not decide the prohibition issue, and was going to let it come to the floor.

The band significantly played "Wawon't Go Home Till Morning," and the convention, ruefully getting the point, did not applaud very loudly. It cheered, however, when the band played "How Dry I Am."

The convention adjourned, until 10 o'clock Friday morning.
