WALKS IN ON HIS OWN WAKE

Then they told him.

James Kelly, of Harrison, N.J., the ext town to Kearny, had dropped ead the day before from sunstroke in Jewark. His death was recorded in the newspapers, and when Mrs. O'Brien ead the item she was filled with fear read the item she was filled with fear that the sun's victim was her brother and that the papers had made an error in spelling his name.

Mrs. O'Brien hurried to St. Michael's Hospital in Newark, where Kelly's body lay. She identified him as her brother, and directed an undertaker to remove the body to Kearney.

Mooney placed the crape on the door, had the body embalmed, and the neighbors were invited in for a last, sad view. After Jim's appearance he held an impromptu reception, and hundreds called to congratulate him.

"But," said a neighbor, "if your painting job had lasted a day longer you'd have come home to find yourself buried!"

A PRESENT FOR EVERYBODY!

New York, June 20—When James Kiely returned to his home, 619 John street, Kearny, N.J., after a few days' absence on a painting job, for which he had a contract, he found his sister, Mrs. Catherine O'Brien, his brothers, Robert and Patrick, and a score of neighbors and friends sitting in the front parlor around a coffin. His kin were weeping. Mr. Kiely, on the threshold, looked in amazement at the scene. He could not think of any relative who had died in the few days he had been away and he was at a loss to understand why the mourners had assembled.

Just then his sister glanced up and saw him in the doorway.

"Jim!" she shrieked, and fainted.
The other mourners, started by her cry and fall, sprang up and looked around.

"When there's lim!" they gried Pat.
