MORNING NEWS OVER THE WIRES

It is learned from Ottawa that the conclusions of the special commission on technical education appointed by the late government are favorable to the establishment of a system of technical schools throughout the dominion.

Mrs. Wm. Day, housekeeper for Thomas Barwise, of Wilmet, P. E. I. was fearfully burned about her body on Saturday when flames from her kitchen fire ignited her clothing. She rushed from the house and threw herself into a water trough.

Dr. Wm. Beattie Nesbitt is back in Toronto again, having been brought there yesterday morning from Chicago by Inspector Boyd. The Canadian official got him on a warrant of arrest, before a writ of habeas corpus could be secured.

Wm. Quinn, a young cartoonist who had been working in Montreal, died yesterday in his home in St. Andrews. He was twenty-five years old and a brilliant young artist.

Four bodies have been recovered by the steamer Montagu from the wreck of the Titanic and are to be brought to Halifax. The steamer Pedronis, arriving at Montreal yesterday, told of passing much wreckage and two bodies near the scene of the disaster.

Commissioner Archibald has announced that the fallen bridge at Walsingham has been raised and put in place and will be ready for traffic tomorrow. It will be supported by a temporary pile structure until a more permanent one can be built.

Arrangements were made on Saturday to incorporate the Moncton Free Public Library Association. A couple of rooms have been provided by the city and the library will be opened in a short time.

Ben. LeBlanc, who escaped from the provincial asylum and was arrested in Moncton on charge of breaking into the cotton mill office, was committed for trial and taken to the county jail at Dorchester Saturday.

DUELING PROBLEM IN FATHERLAND

A Recent Case Which Kaiser Wilhelm Had to Settle

AN AGED LOTHARIO

Seventy Year Old Suitor of Elderly Spinster Who Defrauded His Victims—Awful Blunder of a Nurse Means Two Deaths in Hospital in Berlin

(Times Special Correspondence, Berlin, April 30)—Public opinion here is much occupied with a duelling problem, the details of which have just come to light. The little Wurtemberg town of Merzhausen boasts a volunteer ambulance corps, which took it into its head to change its leader, electing Doctor Sambeth to that position. His predecessor in office, Doctor Schum, was much annoyed by the loss of the post, and wrote to Doctor Sambeth, asserting that the latter owed his success to an intrigue of "a shameless and dishonorable" character. Before the civil courts Doctor Sambeth was able to prove that his conduct in the affair had been blameless, and his libeller was fined $25.

If the parties to the squabble had been ordinary mortals, there the matter would have ended. But they were both members of the Army Medical Reserve, and so subject to these military rules of "honor" which even the corrective irony of Schopenhauer was unable to destroy. Doctor Sambeth was accordingly cited before a "court of honor," to show why he had not challenged Doctor Schum to a duel, which, it appeared in the course of the inquiry, the latter was anxious to bring about.

The wronged man explained that he had refrained from seeking a separation of arms out of consideration for the "Divine command, human law, the dictates of reason, and the welfare of the community." These objections, however, had no weight with his judges, who found him "guilty of an offence against the honor of his station, because he had omitted to procure adequate satisfaction, conformable with his position, for the serious insult put upon him in a quarrel with a professional colleague." It was further adjudged that he should be punished by the humiliation of "simple discharge" from his military rank. "This judgment was submitted for confirmation to the superior, whose decision contains the following passage:

"A rejection of duelling in principle, on the grounds of religious conviction, cannot be made the subject of a judgment of a court of honor, though an army medical officer."

In respect of the fundamental views of his colleagues cannot be allowed to remain any longer in his position in the service. In consideration, however, of the fact that, according to the investigations which have taken place, Doctor Sambeth gave no well-founded cause for the insult offered to him, I will, as a matter of grace, allow him that he at once applies for his discharge."

In other words, the doctor must leave the service if he without the stigma which "simple discharge" would have stamped upon him. Both the Catholic and the Radical press treat this case as yet one more convincing demonstration of the total absurdity of duelling. Doctor Schum, they say, utters a gross and baseless libel, refuses to withdraw it or to apologize; but his honor is unaffected thereby, he remains an officer of the medical service. On the other hand, Doctor Sambeth, because, in obedience to the laws of God and of his country, he refuses to seek his affront's blood, is driven from the service.

Somewhat analogous to the case of Doctor Sambeth is that of Professor Czerny, a great authority on cancer, and one of the most eminent doctors in Germany, who was lately compelled to retire from the Army Medical Reserve because he had given expression to pronounced radical views in connection with the recent general election.

Brother Plea Did Not Work

Herri Paul Breitkopf, a venerable looking old man, with long white beard and a benign smile on his wrinkled face, appeared in court the other day charged as a nationalist swindler, and notwithstanding his seventy years, the defendant had been exercising his charms to win the affections, and subsequently the money of elderly spinsters, to whom he offered his heart and hand.

Several of the victims gave evidence against Herri Breitkopf, who was proved to have defrauded his victims of sums of money and then left them. The old man stoutly denied the charges, and declared that the culprit whom he had not seen for many years. This explanation appears to have had little weight with the judge, who sentenced the fickle septuagenarian lover to four years' imprisonment.

Nurse's Awful Blunder
A mistake in the preparation of an anesthetic in the Great Christie Hospital here has cost two lives. A school-boy named Rieger, fourteen years of age, was brought by his mother to the hospital on account of a throat affection. He was found to be suffering from adenoids, and the physicians decided that his tonsils must be removed. Cocaine was administered.

KEEPS THE SKIN CLEAR AND SOFT
Humors of the skin are especially prevalent in the spring. There is nothing more annoying than to have irritation of the skin and disfiguring eruptions breaking out to mar the beauty of the complexion.

Internal treatments are slow and unsatisfactory in results, but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to heal up the sores and bring lasting relief. Unlike pore-clogging powders, Dr. Chase's Ointment cleans out the pores of the skin and makes it soft, smooth and healthy. It is a food for the skin and a beautifier of the greatest value.

Eczema, salt rheum, psoriasis, chafing and all forms of itching skin disease soon yield to the soothing, healing influence of this well-known ointment. It is indispensable in the home where there are babies and young children.

MURDER OF INSPECTOR JOUIN BY PARIS TAXICAB BANDITS

This shows the body of the assassinated Jouin being carried from the house where he was shot and killed by Benoit, the leader of the bandits, who lured the detective into a house on the pretense of giving information. While ascending the stairs Jouin was shot by the bandit inside. The murderer was subsequently killed in a running fight with the police and soldiers.

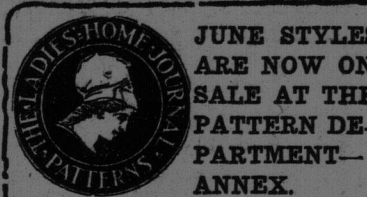

ered to deaden the pain. Owing to a mistake made by the nurse, Gertrude Wanger, a solution of cocaine much stronger than needed was injected. The boy almost immediately threw up his arms and fell back dead.

The distress of the unhappy nurse was so terrible that her own sister—also a nurse—was ordered to keep her under observation to prevent her from committing suicide. Meanwhile the mother, who was awaiting the result of the operation, had to be told. She fell into such terrible hysterics that the nurse was obliged to leave her sister, Gertrude, for a moment in order to help the doctors with Frau Rieger. Gertrude took advantage of the moment of freedom to inject a fatal dose of cocaine, and half an hour later was dead.

A brutal murder was committed here by a carman named Ferdinand Mikow. The man has the reputation of having for many years been an industrious worker and a good husband and father, but lately he had taken to drink and thereby lost his employment and been abandoned by his wife and grown-up children. He seems to have spent most of his time trying to find out where his family was hiding from him, in the hope of inducing them to support him. In particular he pestered his wife's sister, Frau Herlich, with his inquiries, and extorted from her various small sums of money.

The other afternoon he inveigled this woman into his rooms, and after a short altercation, battered her head to a shapeless mass with a piece of lead piping. Appropriating her purse, he went off to a public house, where he told his acquaintances that he was trying to drink himself into a state of courage, as he was tired of life, and intended either to drown or hang himself.

In very few houses in the French West Indies are kerosene lamps to be found, candles being used almost exclusively for household lighting. The import duties make it impossible for the people, who are very poor, to use either kerosene or gasolene.
