FIRST EDITION. BURCHELL'S CELLS.

BENWELL'S DESTRUCTION TAKEN TO THE JAIL AT WOODSTOCK.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., March 15.—When the express from the Bridge rolled into the station today there was a large crowd waiting to see Burchell. The latter had to walk the length of the road to reach a cab which was waiting, and this gave everyone present the opportunity of seeing him. He wore rather a nervous sort of smile as he glanced furtively at the crowd, as if he recognized old friends or to see if any demonstration would be made against him. The most perfect silence was preserved. The party having reached the jail, the prisoner jumped nimbly from the cab and walked boldly in, with a smile on his face. He shook hands with Jaffer Cameron and others, and chatted and talked with a nonchalant ease which surprised him. He was faintly dressed, his face was shaven, and his general demeanor would impress one with the idea that his great weight but lightly on his shoulders.
