THE MOCKING BIRD. He didn't know much music When first he come along: An' all the birds went wonder Why he didn't sing a song.

They primped their feathers in the sun, and sung their sweetest notes; an' music jes' come on the run
From all their thrillin' throats! But still that bird was silent In summer time an' fall; He jes' set still an' listened, An' he wouldn't sing at all.

But one night when them songsters Was tired out an' still, An' the wind siglied down the valley An' went creepin' up the hill; When the stars was all a-tremble In the dreamin' fields o' blue,
An' the daisy in the darkness
Felt the fallin' o' the dew;

There come a sound o' melody
No mortal ever heard.
An' all the birds seemed singin'
From the throat o' one sweet bird! Then the other birds went Mayin'
In a land too fur to call;
For there warn't no use in stayin'
When one bird could sing for all!

A WESTERN IDYL.

"So this is Bang-Up City? Then the place is a living geographical lie." Rose Kenyon looked indignant as she said this. As she gazed about the collection of saloons and other dingy shanties which constituted the only visible portion of the far-famed mining camp the indig-nant expression on her face deepened in nant expression on her face deepened in intensity.

For Miss Kenyon had been led to ex-pect a very different sort of place.

She had been told that Bang-Up City was a species of earthly paradise, whose inhabitants were so well satisfied with life there that they did not care to make even a short excursion out into the outer world.

Finally Rose's eye fell upon a nonde-script-looking Chinaman who was com-ing leisurly up the road. He was not an inviting specimen of the Mongolian race. To begin with, he was dirty. To add to that he was very ragged. And, to cap all, he had one of the most hid-eous faces ever seen.

"Cally yo' glip, missy?" he demanded, as he came close to her and picked up the heavy valise which lay at Miss Keny-on's feet.

on's feet.

"Is there a hotel here?" Rose asked.

"Yes, missy; you wantee go there?"

"Yes,"

"Then I cally yo' bag."

"How much?" asked Rose. She had a New England eye to the cost of things.

"Two bitee, missy."
"All right. Lead the way to the "All right. Lead the way to the place."

The Chinaman started down the dusty road, followed by Miss Kenyon. As hey got into what might be called the heart of the city Rose saw that there were a good many men about. As she walked along the number of men became larger, and she noticed, not without uneasiness, that they all appeared to be following her. For, in some way, it got noised about this decidedly pretty young woman was the new schoolma am.

Walker turned to the Chinaman and said authoritatively:
"Drop that grip right there, Jim Wah.
I'll look after it."

"You pay me, missy," said the China-Any miner would have given five dollars bonus for the privilege of paying the Chinaman, but all felt, after a brief inspection of Miss Kenyon, that it would not be a safe offer to make.

Miss Kenyon took out her purse and drew from it a silver quarter.
"Four bites," said the Chinaman.
"Why," expostulated Rose, "you offered to carry it for twenty-five "You heap lie," retorted Jim Wah, "Me said four bitee—"
Jim Wah didn't finish. There was a

Walker pulled off his sombrero, and, bowing with native grace, and holding the smoking pistol pointed at the ground said:
"I beg yer pardon for scaring yer, miss, but no Chinese galoot can insult a lady when I'm 'round."
For Rose Kenyen had given a startled shriek, and now looked as if she was about to faint.

Jim Walker stood over her with a shame-faced air and said: shame-faced air and said:

"No, miss; he ain't very bad hurt, that's sure. I'm ashamed of myself. I ought to have done better. The next time I'll make sure of killing the mooneyed galoot."
Rose looked up at him with a look of Then she turned to the others and

"So has a wonkey or a rattlesnake."

"But a Chinaman's life is human."

"You're the first, miss, who ever said so in E.ng. Up City. We hain't been used to looking at it that way. All we know 'bout 'em is that they're more low down than Injuns. I beg yer pardon for saying it, miss; but when you've been here longer you'll think the same way about it that we do."

"Never!" retorted Rose, with a shudder. "If I thought that I could ever become so hard hearted by remaining here I would take the next train east."

At this declaration the men looked apprehensive. The vision of trim, pretty, dainty womanhood had just dawned in Bang Up City. Better even that a China-Bang Up City. Better even that a Chinaman should be mayor than that she should go from them.

"Boys," proclaimed Walker, "from this day forth no Chinaman is to be shot at. Do you hear?"

At chorus of affirmatives came from the crowd. Then came a gust of sighs. It was a difficult law to live up to.

"We are losing time." cried Rose, "find the poor victim is losing blood. Take him on to the hotel, if you please, gentlemen."

gentlemen."

From that day on Jim Walker was in disgrace with the new schoolma'am. For two weeks she attended the wounded Chinaman in all her leisure time. At last Jim Wah was discharged as tured.

It was months before Jim Walker could get back into the good graces of Miss Kenyon. And when she did once more condescend to treat him as an equal, the poor fellow, who was desperately in love with her, felt that it would be worse than folly to even dream of declaring his passion to her. would be worse than folly to even dream of declaring his passion to her.

"And all over a cussed Chinaman, too," he would mutter.

One night in winter Rose Kenyon sat all alone in her room at the hotel. It was dark, but she had not lit the lamp, for she preferred in her then mood to sit in the dark and think.

Suddenly she became aware that the door had o; ened, though it was done noiselessly enough. Her eyes being accustomed to the darkness, she was able to make out the nondescript figure of Jim Wah. He stole toward the table on which she had deposited a satchel con-which she had deposited a satchel containing her last month's salary.

The Ch. naman must have figured or must have known where the little satchel lay, for he went to it without hesitation picked it up and started to leave the ro.m.

"Give that to me at once, Jim Wah," cried Rose, springing to her feet and seizing the Chinaman resolutely by the

The noise of footsteps was heard. Jim Wah uttered a Mongolian curse and draw a gleaming knife.

Just at this moment the door opened, and five or six much bust into the room.

One of them carried a lamp.

A shot rang out, and Jim Wah sank to the foor. He was dead.

The stot had been fired just in time to save Rose Kenyon's life.

It was Jim Wahler who had fired the shot, and it was he who said, triumphantly:

"I told yer, Miss Kenyon, that the next time I fired at that Ohinese galoot I'd kill him."

But Rose didn't hear him. She had fainted.

"Boys," ordered Jim, "carry out that yellow banke"—pointing to the blood.
