

The Daughter of Kison Ludim.

SYNOPSIS OF PLEADING CHAPTERS.—Prince Phalio, Tyrone's daughter, is kidnapped by King Mapeo. She escapes and is imprisoned by King Mapeo. He escapes.

CHAPTER X. On the next morning, King Mapeo entered his divan and shortly afterwards he was joined by the prince. The first thing the king did was to ask his son to send for the jailer.

"Yes, and I think it's a good one," said Mapeo, after the attendant had gone on his errand.

"I'll starve his secret from him," returned the king, with sparkling eyes. "He is strong and powerful now, and that makes him proud, but just let him waste away because of want of food, and I think I will take down his stubbornness some what."

"Glorious!" ejaculated Phalio. "He will be a more stubborn man than I take him to be. He will not let me have obtained justice, and I will long against such a course. Not a week certainly."

"No, not over half of it, for he shall perch with thirst, too." "Then may fortune crown our efforts, and let him die last night, and shall not escape me. Phalio! I was a fool to love so easily before, but I had no thoughts of her running so nimbly."

"And you were foolish, too," added the king, "that you did not push your search in the armorer's house, for you might have obtained justice, and slain him at a distance."

"Yes, but such a squad of people being collected about the door, would matter too serious a turn." "We must hang a score or two of the king upon the wall, and I will hang the king, as a dark soul disgraced his face."

"What of that I had the hanging of the whole of them," kindly offered the prince, with an impatient movement.

"Ah, here comes the jailer," uttered Mapeo, as that functionary made his appearance.

clear the passage beyond and spring up the stairs; but on pushing open the door that next stood in his way, he started back in dismay.

"The king has ordered it." "If you know whether he went, oh, tell us, for Mapeo holds me to know the lady's displeasure will fall heavily upon my head."

"If you would find him you must seek him," said Balbec; "and if your head is in danger then you had better hasten, for Gio is not a man to be easily taken."

"This speaking, the priest walked slowly out from the apartment, the soldiers, trembling, stood one side, and the prince followed him, with ten thousand reasons why he should not take off the villain's head."

"The prince knew his father too well to stop for further argument, and without remark he followed the soldier from the royal presence. It took but a short time to call the armorer's man to account, and ten minutes from the time of the prince's departure the commander was in the presence of the king.

"Are you the centurion?" asked Mapeo, as the officer entered the room.

"I am, sire," returned he, not a little surprised that the monarch should take him to account, seeing that he had been in attendance upon the king for years.

"No, not over half of it, for he shall perch with thirst, too." "Then may fortune crown our efforts, and let him die last night, and shall not escape me. Phalio! I was a fool to love so easily before, but I had no thoughts of her running so nimbly."

HALL & RUCKEL, Montreal. network of tiny tubes, one 3,000 part of an inch in diameter, which form the structure of the skin all over the body; but their function is even stranger still, for they will allow nothing to pass through their walls save what is directly required.

BURTFUL OR SUPERFLUOUS. The result is perspiration, which passes out through myriads of tiny glands to the skin. At religious fairs in France during the Middle Ages a child was given a medal to make it represent a golden image of the Saviour. It died in a few hours, because of the impurities of its own blood which were prevented from getting through the skin.

But perhaps the most striking feature connected with the working of the human body is the fact that we have two brains, a mechanical and a mental one as they may be called. The brain is situated at the top of the back of the head at the top of the spinal column. The other occupies the front of the head, and is the one we do our thinking and feeling and willing with. But, although we are conscious of only one human organ, it has no control over the little brain at the back.

WE GROW OLD IN PIECES.

The general impression is that the body grows old uniformly; from birth till the age of 25, it grows in size and weight, from 25 to 50 it remains stationary, and from that period it decays. Observations of experts, however, show that this impression is not a correct one. Each organ begins to age independently, so that its period of change, and these periods differ with the various organs and do not take place coincidentally, as we have supposed. The body attains its greatest size during the third decade, and remains in that condition during the fourth and fifth decades, that is true; but the brain reaches its greatest size in the second decade, the kidneys reach their maximum size during the third decade, the muscles, skeleton and intestines during the fifth, the heart and lungs in the eighth decade.
