Aunt Maria's to consult with our cousins, the "other girls." We always drifted into Grandma's room It was the largest, pleasantest room in the house, and Ganlma was so bright and cheery we loved to be with her. She sat by that morning, occasionally putting in her quist word, while we went deep into the subject of straws and bonnets and leghorns, high crowns, rolling brims, tips, plumes, ribbons, etc. It was all settled at ast that Louise, being fair, should get a pale blue, shirred-like bonnet, and Cousin Clara a white crepe one with pink roses. Sister Ruth's bonnet was to be like herself, quiet and sweet-a fine straw with a bit of delicate lace and heliotrope; while mine, brim, faced with black velvet, and glowing with scallet poppies. There was no need of such clatter and consultation, however, provide herself with the identical head-

Grandma slept peacefully. There lingered on her dear face the light of the parting smile she had given us at parting. Fair flowers were all about her, and I noticed as I bent over her for the last time, how pure and fresh the white ribbon was which tied her cap, and then with a pang remembered her old bonnet strings. Dear grandma, she had gone where garments are without spot or wrinkle. How she would enjoy white raiment, the purity, the unchanging freshness of the heavenly land.

We all loved grandma dearly. For a time it seemed as if we could not go on without her. One day, towards evening, a longing seized me to look once more into grandma's room; so I went across the street and stole around to the side door which opened directly into her room. It was ajar and I stepped softly in. Grand's armchair -empty!-stood by the window. I leaned over it, trying to picture her as I had seen all agreed should be a hat with rolling her so often sitting at dusk humming her favorite hymn, "Sun of my soul, Saviour dear." But the sound of sobbing reached my ears, and looking up I saw in for each, after receiving advice, decided to the shadows, at the further end of the large room, Aunt Maria standing by the bureau; grandma's bonnet was in her hand. She turned it about and looked at it as if she would torture herself with the certainty that it was indeed shabby; then she kissed it again and again, and bowed her head over it in an agony of bitter weeping. And while you're about it," she said, as she I had thought Aunt Maria self-constrained

General Show Above the Average--Som Exhibits Exceptionally Good.

Hopewell Hill, Oct. 16-One of the m Vest occessful fairs in the history of the A bert Agricultural Society No. 58, was held The weather was most favor ere today able and there was a large attendance. The show in general was above the average of the exhibits being exceptional The cattle exhibit was an improv former years. Horses, sheep and fowls were average. A feature of the horse show was the exhibit by Albert S. Matton of a brood mare with four colts, all by the same sire, the fot taking three firsts and one second prize. The fruit exhibit was a fine one, being vast improvement over former shows train and roots were also good and there was a liberal exhibit of funcy work, ot excellent quality. Dinners were given in the public hall by the ladies of the Methodist church, the receipts being for church purposes. Following is the prize list:

The Rich, Red Blood Made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Gives New Strength to Every Nerve, Fibre and Organ of the Body. From the Budget, Shelburne, N.S.

Among the young ladies of Shelburne, N.S. Among the young ladies of Shelburne, there is none to-day who more fully bears the impress of perfect health than Miss Lilian Durfee. Unfortunately this was not always the case, as a few years ago Miss Durfee became ill, and her friends feared that she was more here belies. A destro that she felt like saying: "Give it to me, Grandma, I will have it all freshened up for you, and I'll pay for it myself."
But none of us ever thought of going contrary to A unt Maria's decrees. She was the commander in chief of both household?.
Grandma took her bonnet in silence, and jut it back in the drawer. She was not a raw of a few rods would completely fatigue her. Trembled on her eyelid as she bent her white head an unnecessary length of time over her drawer. She felt hurt, I know she did. She was not a vain old lady, but her tastes were nice, and she knew as well as any of us younger ones that her bonnet in silence, and finally grew so weak that a walk of a few rods would completely fatigue her. Trembled on her eyelid as she bent her white head an unnecessary length of time over her drawer. She felt hurt, I know she did. She was not a vain old lady, but her tastes were nice, and she knew as well as any of us younger ones that her bonnet in silence, and finally grew as the consumption would belp her after the doctor's treatment, it's treatment, it's treatment, it's treatment is ling, and finally prevailed, god friend still urged, and finally prevailed, by the south window in her armehair. As I watched her I fell to wond dring if her thoughts were going back just now over the years to the time when Anni Maria was a baby. They were poor then, and I had heard Grandma tell how she did her own work, and made shirts for soveral families to help make the ends meet. Was a na sewed to earn money enough to buy a cunning little white hood, made of satin and sewal's down, for her baby girl? Or and sewed to earn money enough to buy a cunning little white hood, made of satin and swau's down, for her baby girl? Or did she remember how many weary stitches it took to earn that time broad-brimmed straw hat trimmed with white ribbon, that her thirteen-year-old daughter might be "like other girls?" Perhaps her mind dwelt en a story she had often told me, how, when Aunt Maria was nineteen, there came an invitation for her to go to Boston came an invitation for her to go to Boston Pink Pills."

Pale and anaemic girls, or young people and spend a month. "Maria felt bad," Grandma's story rao, "because she thought her hat wasn't fit to wear, I had a bonnet made of a handsome piece of velvet that my brother sent me from Paris, I didn't say a word to any-body.
