Raynham, the British aviators contending for first honors in a transatlantic flight to the Irish coast, were compelled to postpone their "hop off" again to-day when meteorological reports from mid-ocean, in face of perfect flying conditions here, once more showed adverse winds and weather far at sea.

Official prediction of rain for England for the next two days was received here, and is accepted as indicating a delay of more than forty-eight hours.

The inauguration of daylight saving in Newfoundland to-night, when clocks will be set ahead an hour throughout the country, brought a revision of calculations for the flight, although it has not seriously altered plans.

An order-in-council to this effect was signed by the Governor-General on Thursday. It was passed under the provisions of the existing Immigration Act which gives authority to this end.

The order recites that "owing to conditions prevailing as a result of the war, a widespread feeling exists throughout the Dominion, and more particularly in western Canada, that steps should be taken to prevent the entry into Canada of all persons who may be regarded as undesirable because, owing to their peculiar customs, habits, modes of living, and methods of holding property, they are not likely to become readily assimilated or to assume the duties and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship within a reasonable time."

FRENCH ACE FONCK CHAMPION OF AIR

Canadian Aviator, Lieut. Col. Wm. Bishop, Comes Second.

Bishop, the Canadian aviator, who won the Victoria Cross, comes next. Major Mannock brought down 73 enemy machines and Lieut. Col. Bishop 72. Of all the allies, Lieut. Colonel Rene Fonck, the French ace, holds the record with 78.

The late Baron Richthofen, of German circus fame, claimed to hold the world's record for the number of machines he had destroyed, but the Germans worked on a different system respecting official confirmation of each victory, and his record has not been confirmed.

Major Mannock was born in India of British parents, thirty years ago, and was considered the greatest aerial tactician the Royal Air Force produced. Among his awards was the War Medal of the Aero Club of America. He was finally shot down by fire from the ground.

The Nurse Who Stayed Home

We have hailed with adoration our nurses overseas. And their worthy deeds of valor justly brought us to our knees; But there's still another ideal—and we haven't far to roam— 'Tis the girl who nursed the old folks and the babies here at home.

Hers the task to heal the aged or the children left behind; Hers the lot to render comfort unto those of feeble mind; Hers to serve in ward and household in this land from sea to sea. While her sister nurses served the cause in winning victory.

And she had no thrill of battle to excite her to her task; And she had no dream of glory—ah! what honors could she ask? It was naught but simple goodness—love of home, of life and art—That has kept her at the bedside in her vigils with the chart.

Oh, the never-ending story of our womanhood in war! The imperishable glory that is heralded afar! Here's a health to her that ventured far beyond the ocean foam, And a double health forever to the nurse who stayed at home.

The Front Line

Mr. Philip Gibbs, the famous war correspondent, recently told a London audience a good story. It was at the time of the Huns' first precipitate retreat to the Hindenburg Line, when it was dangerous to go in pursuit of the enemy. Mr. Gibbs was out with an officer, and, not knowing where the line ran, approached a sergeant who was standing by a ruin smoking a cigarette. "Can you tell me where the line is, sergeant?" queried the officer. The sergeant took the cigarette from his mouth and calmly replied: "As a matter of fact, sir, I am the front line."
