

The Boy Scouts' Roll of Honour

By ERIC WOOD

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL Sir Robert Baden-Powell, K.C.B., K.C.V.O., Chief Scout, writes a Foreword to Eric Wood's new work, one of the most enthralling books on Scouts and Scouting published. In this volume is to be found the record of a multitude of Scouts, who, true to their motto, have been prepared. They have seized the great opportunity when it has come, at the risk of life and limb, have plunged into sea, river, and burning houses; have grappled with maddened beasts; have fought cowardly mobs in the effort to help policemen in the execution of their duty; in fact, whenever the call of duty has come, they have answered with a courage that is the sign-manual of the Scout. Each story has been written from the official records, and the Home Country, Australasia, Canada, India, Africa—all have contributed their quota of heroes to a book which is the first of its kind.

BOOKS will be the most-generally-given gifts this year since they are not only reasonable in price but are always acceptable and long and graceful reminders of the giver. Following are a few of the newest of the season which you can give without hesitation to almost anyone.

The Call of the East

By Thurlow Fraser

The author, one of your own Presbyterian ministers, and a member of your Foreign Mission Board, has written a Canadian novel full of love, life and incident, which compares favorably with any other Canadian romance.
