200 Per Cent. Increase In Calves

A few years ago calves sold for about $5.00 a piece, now they are worth all the way from $15 to $19 each. Get your share of this calf money by raising sturdy, vigorous calves. You can do it by the use of

Pratt's

It should be given to the cows before and after calving. This will not only keep the cow in prime condition, but also insure strong, healthy calves. Scours and other diseases can be prevented by mixing Pratt's Animal Regulator in the milk or other feed given the calf. It keeps horses, cows and hogs healthy—and healthy animals are money-makers.

Pratt's Animal Regulator pays for itself in feed economy—less is required because every ounce is thoroughly assimilated and digested. Try Pratt's Animal Regulator on your stock this Spring, at our risk.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

MANURING WHEAT—UNPROFITABLE SHEEP—ABNORMAL APPETITE—EMMER.

1. A field of sod that I plowed last fall is a clay loam, with quite a bit of clover in it. I intend to put a mixed crop on it this spring, sowing about 1 bushel oats, $\frac{1}{2}$ bushel peas, $\frac{1}{2}$ bushel barley. Would that be a good mixture for fattening stock? Would it be all right to sow wheat on the field in the fall? Have a lot of manure for this field. Would it be better to put it on this spring, or top dress in the fall? Would like to put it on this spring. Would the spring crop take out all the strength and not leave any for the wheat?

2. I bought a farm two years ago and all the sheep on it. Had bad luck. Could not average a lamb apiece. They had lots of run, and in the winter were fed alfalfa and a little oats. Several died last summer, all young ewes. What was the cause? Some claim they have been on the place too long. Is there anything in that?

3. Does it pay to keep a ewe again if she misses one year? Some say they get too fat, and won't breed.

4. Do you think hay and wheat will go much higher in price before haying time?

5. A bunch of hogs four months old are not doing very well. Chickens have free run with them, and the pigs eat the droppings as fast as they can find them, and run away from the trough and hunt for them. Does this hurt them, or keep them from growing?

6. Where can a person get a bushel or so of emmer? A READER.

Ans.—1. Your grain mixture would be an excellent one for fattening stock, and, though the greatest yields have been obtained by sowing oats and barley together, yet, considering the fact that you wish to follow this crop with wheat, it is wisdom to have peas also in the mixture. Would strongly advise applying the manure in the spring; especially would that be advisable if sod were to be plowed in spring and manure turned under. In such case, the spring grain gets but little from the manure, but on the land being plowed for wheat, the manure is left mostly on the surface, and in best available condition for benefiting wheat. The heaviest crop of wheat the writer ever saw had been treated in just that way.

2. It would be unwise to guess what was the matter with the sheep, and any opinion given without more definite information, could be but a guess. It is not unlikely that the flock, having been on the farm for a long time, had something to do with it, although, on the home farm of one of our staff, a flock of sheep had been kept for sixty years without change of foundation stock, and no loss of vigor was apparent.

3. There is no reason why ewes should not be bred though they miss a year.

4. Our reputation for wisdom is too precious to be risked in predicting prices. Ask some authority that is not so careful in statements. There are many corner-store philosophers who can give you definite advice—such as it is. The wonder is that some of these wisacres are not millionaires.

5. The fact that the hogs have an appetite for such stuff, indicates that their food is lacking in some constituent that they need. The hog is an omnivorous animal, and, to be healthy, must have a variety of food. Are you feeding roots, or sulphur, or woodashes, salt, charcoal, or milk, or some other form of animal food? Hogs should have all of these, not mixed with the food, but where they may have access to them at will.

6. Any reputable seedsmen can supply you with emmer.

THE EXPLANATION

"Doctor," said the patient, who had been ailing for a long time, "he frank with me. Why do you demand such a large fee for cutting out my appendix?"

"Well, the truth is," exclaimed the frank M.D., "when I remove that appendix I cut off my chief source of revenue."
