London, Feb. 11.—Speaking on Germany's war aims and dangers of a premature peace, Lord Denbigh described the people who are out for peace at any price and certain others as in class "Z," separating them as follows:

"The Z. 1's are those who are ignorant of the situation and do not know what they are talking about."

"The Z. 2's are utter rotters, men who want the war to end because they cannot get margarine or because their beer is thin."

"The Z. 3's are the enemy agents in the pay of Germany, trying to lower the morale of the soldiers and the people."

New Order of Things Sure Consequence of the Great Struggle

A PASTORAL LETTER

Roman Catholic Archbishop of Westminster Talks of Social Conditions

London, Feb. 10.—Cardinal Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, issued today a pastoral letter in which he dwells upon the grave changes in social conditions as a result of the war.

"The times through which we are passing are fraught with anxiety of every kind," says the Cardinal. "It is not necessary to gaze upon the conflict of nations which afflicts the world to find matter of serious concern. At home, in our midst, there are signs of trouble and disturbance which are only very partially revealed in the public press, but are well known to those in authority, and which portend the possibility of a grave social upheaval in the future. It is admitted on all hands that a new order of things, new social conditions, new relations between the different sections in which society is divided will arise as a consequence of the destruction of the formerly existing social order."

The Cardinal asks what part the Catholic Church can play in this transformation, and replies to the question by indicating that Catholics must not remain apathetic and stand aside from the social movements of the day.

The Greed of Gain

Cardinal Bourne traces the causes of the present conflict far beyond the events of the summer of 1914.

"A new relation of society had come into being," he says. "Men and women of high aim and noble Christian belief came to be dominated by ideas which had no ground in Christian principle. The desire of gain at all cost, without reference to the consequences thereby entailed, seized upon vast numbers of the nation and became a ruling principle. Other nations had been learning the lesson, notably the confederation of nations, which is now our chief enemy."

"With the thoroughness of purpose and scientific determination that characterize her, Germany has sought worldwide predominance by setting boldly and consistently before her the materialistic aims which for too long have deluded and misled our British people. She desires her place in the sun and as might was only too often right in the industrial struggles within the limits of our own people, the principles which, happily, to an increasing extent are now being discarded among us—she claims that might is right in the world domain for which she is now struggling to her doom. Happily, do we see these false principles being discarded among us, for were it not so the future of our people would be as bleak as the future which they have brought rapidly upon them."

"They proclaim that the existing order should be overthrown and destroyed in the hope that out of this chaos and destruction some better arrangement of men's lives may grow up. It is a policy of which we see the realization and first fruits at the present time in Russia. The vast majority of our people are held back, it not by religious motives, at least by their inborn practical sense, from suicidal projects of this kind. The new sense of the reality of religion with which hundreds of thousands of the Englishmen have been impressed during the war, the Cardinal thinks, will be one safeguard. The dangers, however, are very real, he says.

"The effect of competition uncontrolled by moralities has been to segregate more and more the capitalist from the wage-earning classes," he says, "and to form the latter into a proletariat, a people owning nothing but their own power and tending to shrink more and more from the responsibilities of both ownership and freedom. Hence the increasing lack of self-reliance and the tendency to look to the State for the performance of the ordinary family duties. While the constitution had increasingly taken on democratic forms, the reality underlying those forms had been increasingly plutocratic. Legislation under the guise of social reform tended to mark off all wage-earners as a definitely servile class, and the result before the war was a feeling among the workers of irritation and resentment which manifested itself in sporadic strikes but found no very clear expression in any other form."

Reform is Demanded

"During the war the minds of the people have been profoundly altered. Dual allegiance in social injustice has given way to active discontent. The very foundations of political and social life, of our economic system, of morals and religion, are being sharply scrutinized and this not only by a very large number of people in every class of life, especially among the workers. Our institutions, it is felt, must justify themselves at the bar of reason. They can no longer be taken for granted. The army, for instance, is not only fighting, it is also thinking. The soldiers have learned the characteristics of an army scorn for the self-seeking politician and empty talker. They have learned the wide difference between the facts as they see them and the daily press reports of them, and they have learned to be suspicious of official utterances and bureaucratic ways.

Voluntary War Workers

"The voluntary war workers also have had their experience widened. Not only are many of them doing useful work for the first time in their lives, and doing it well, but they are working in companionship with and sometimes under the direction of those with whom they would not, in normal times, have dreamed of associating. They are re-adjusting their views on social questions. There is, in short, a general change and ferment in the mind of the nation."

The Cardinal points out various lines of special Catholic effort, but urges cordial co-operation in the various religious bodies to remedy all un-Christian social conditions.

"Without any sacrifice of religious principles," he says, "Catholics may welcome the support of all men of good-will in this great and patriotic task."
